ADMINISTRATION 'SMOKED OUT' BY BORAH, SHOWING POWER IN SENATE

While He Has Withdrawn Proposal on Economic Conference, He Has Brought Out Statements From Government of Interest in European Affairs.

FINE ORATORY IN DEBATE ON MOTION

Johnson of California Opposes His Former Brother in Fight on the League, With Sarcastic Discourse on "Conferences."

BY CHARLES G. ROSS.
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—The fact that Senator Borah has withdrawn his proposed amendment requesting the President to call an international economic conference is of small consequence. The resolution would have been beaten by the administration forces if it had come to a vote and the Senator from Idaho knew it.

What really counts is that the fight made by Borah has "smoked out" the administration. It brought from administration spokesmen, first on the floor of the Senate yesterday afternoon, later at the White House itself and finally in the speech by Secretary of State Hughes at New Haven last night, definite assurances that the United States is interesting itself in the European situation.

Though worsted on the surface of events, even called by some commentators a "quitter," Borah has, in fact, scored an important success. He has proved himself again, as he did in the fight over the League of Nations, a force to be reckoned with in the Senate, perhaps the greatest single force in that body as now constituted.

Influence in Next Senate.

His prospective influence in the next Senate with its greater admixture of progressives is even more potent. If the administration does not perform as Borah thinks it should, he can and doubtless will set off a stick of dynamite under it by quoting the record of yesterday's proceedings in the Senate just prior to his withdrawal of his resolution. It is to be noted, moreover, that Borah squelched his resolution only in so far as the pending naval bill was concerned. He said later that he would keep it in hand ready to offer it in connection with some other bill if he should see fit.

Borah's shift from belligerency on behalf of his proposal to calm acceptance of apparent defeat came with dramatic suddenness after three and a half hours of spirited debate. His action was directly inspired by remarks which his hot attack had wrung from Senators Lodge, Watson and McCormick of the administration group.

These three told him, in effect, that the administration was already putting out "feelers" or engaged in "conversations" with foreign Governments, to find out how the United States could best help to cure Europe's economic troubles and that adoption of his resolution would only embarrass the Government in its effort.

In view of the statements by Lodge, Watson and McCormick, Borah said he was willing to withdraw the resolution.

Crowds Hear Oratory.

The preceding debate was of high oratorical quality. All the public galleries were filled throughout the afternoon, while crowds stood in the corridors outside, awaiting a chance to enter. Even the diplomatic gallery, usually a yawning emptiness, held a fair quota of interested listeners from the embassies and legations.

The setting, the forensic excellence of the discussion and the content of the speeches, all recalled the historic fight over the League of Nations. The great point of difference was the appearance of Borah, a leading "irreconcilable" against the league, in the role of ardent champion of American co-operation to assist in the financial rehabilitation of Europe.

Borah Against Johnson.

It was strange to see those one-time brothers-in-arms, Johnson and Borah, girding at each other.

Johnson spoke fervidly and well against the resolution, denouncing it with all the phrases of sarcasm and

SENATE PASSES $325,000,000 NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL

Borah Does Not Offer Conference Amendment and Limitation Agreement Is Not Discussed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—The $325,000,000 naval appropriation bill was passed late today by the Senate.

Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, did not offer his amendment for a world economic conference, and the Senate did not discuss or change the House provision requesting the President to negotiate for a further naval limitation agreement.

A supplementary appropriation of $6,500,000 for modernization of battleships was requested of Congress today by President Harding, who transmitted a letter from Secretary Denby, declaring that, as a result of the arms conference decision, the nation must adopt a new policy regarding its capital ships if they are "to be maintained at a standard of efficiency comparable to that of similar vessels of foreign Powers.

"MONTH'S RENT FREE" AD STIRS MEMORIES OF YEARS GONE BY

No Mistake About It, Either—Apartment in Question Is in 5200 Block on Vernon Avenue.

Those who have remained optimists, first through years of expectancy, then during a period of doubt when it appeared as though an unwritten law had forbidden all altruism, are rewarded. An apartment is offered for lease with a month's free rent!

About a month ago an announcement appeared in the Post-Dispatch telling of such a boon, but the advertisement proved to be ill-advised and the philanthropic real estate agent was told by the owner that his services no longer were needed. This probably caused the pessimists to revert to "I told you so" and led to a more sincere belief in the continuance of pay-as-you-enter renting.

The realty company which inserted the month's-rent-free advertisement in Thursday's Post-Dispatch said it was the first time the company had done such a thing in years. The reason given was that the company wished to lease the apartment without delay. This strange specimen of abode, a relic of the obsolete among owners and agents, is in the 5200 block on Vernon avenue.

Identified as Bank Robbers.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 30.—Witnesses of the holdup of Drovers National Bank messengers here recently in which $97,000 was obtained, today identified James Caverty, George Williams and Fred McClure as members of the bandit gang. Caverty and Williams were arrested in New Orleans early this week and returned to Kansas City last night.

LEMP FUNERAL TOMORROW FROM BREWERY OFFICE

Verdict That He Was Suffering From Temporary Mental Aberration When He Shot Self.

COMPANY OFFICER TELLS OF DEPRESSION

Henry Vahlkamp Says That When Prohibition Went in Effect, Lemp Stated Doubt Beer Would Return.

A verdict that William J. Lemp, president of the William J. Lemp Brewing Co., who shot and killed himself yesterday, was suffering from temporary mental aberration, was returned by a Coroner's jury today.

The funeral will be tomorrow at 2 p. m. from the brewery office at 3322 South Thirteenth street in which Lemp ended his life. Associates said the office had been chosen for sentimental reasons. It formerly was the family residence and Lemp's father, William J. Lemp, shot and killed himself there on Feb. 13, 1904, and his funeral was held there. That was the first of three suicides in the family. The second was that of the elder daughter, Mrs. Elsa Lemp Wright, who shot and killed herself on March 20, 1920.

Testimony of Business Worry.

Testimony at the inquest was that Lemp's act was the result of worry and depression over decline in value of the company's property through prohibition. It is recalled that the physical plant of the brewery, which had been appraised in preprohibition times at about $7,000,000, was sold last June at public auction for $585,000.

In this connection, Henry Vahlkamp, vice president of the company, with which he has been associated for 54 years, said that Lemp always had confided business matters to him, and that shortly after prohibition became effective and the brewery was closed, Lemp in several conversations had discussed the improbability that the brewing of beer ever would be restored to its former commercial importance, if at all. He said that this visibly depressed Lemp and that more recently this depression had been so noticeable that he had feared Lemp was declining mentally.

He told that yesterday, upon his arrival at the office, Lemp had said to him that he was "feeling worse." Vahlkamp said that he had endeavored to cheer Lemp by telling him that he looked better, but that Lemp repeated: "I may look better, but I am feeling worse."

Secretary's Testimony.

Miss Olivette Berchek of 3841 Michigan avenue, who was Lemp's secretary, testified that Lemp had been ill for some time and that during the last three or four weeks he had been decidedly nervous, complaining frequently of chills. She said that lately he had been inclined to let business matters slide, whereas previously, he had been very methodical and attentive to details.

Upon her arrival at the office yesterday, Miss Berchek testified, Lemp was already at his desk. She said she greeted him and that soon he remarked to her: "Don't you think I have had enough of doctors?" Shortly afterward, he asked: "Don't you think I've had enough trouble?" She said she understood the first remark to refer to the fact that Lemp recently had been in hospitals three times for short periods. The latter remark she interpreted to refer to the troubles of the brewery, the unremunerative liquidation of its affairs and the depression of the company's business.

Telephoned Wife.

Lemp then telephoned to his wife at the Chase Hotel. His secretary did not overhear the conversation, but immediately after its close, Lemp dismissed her to go to another employe to inquire about some corres-

20 DETECTIVES TO AID NATIONS NEW YEAR'S EVE

Federal Enforcement Agent Obtains Force to Keep Celebration "Absolutely Dry."

Declaring his staff of Federal enforcement agents is not adequate to keep the "lid" clamped on at the New Year's eve celebrations tomorrow night, Federal Prohibition Enforcement Agent Nations today requested a detail of 20 detectives from Chief of Detectives Hoagland. It was granted.

Nations was asked if he was going to make use of the blanket warrant authorizing him to search all persons in places where it is suspected that liquor is being served, but he declined to comment on his plans. He did remark the New Year's eve merrymaking would be "absolutely dry." It is understood the "extra dry reserves" will visit all of the hotels and other places of celebration tomorrow night.

There will be no "sniffing" or "snooping" by policemen for "private stock" tomorrow night, but if they observe violations of the dry law those observed will be subject to arrest. This policy was developed in a conference between Chief of Police O'Brien and the district Captains.

Chief O'Brien instructed the Captains to see that the laws are not violated, but advised against policemen using all their time searching for evidence of violations involving personal possession of liquor.

Petitions for Return of His Silver Flask.

George Lurie, one of eight customers arrested last Saturday night when Cafferata's Cafe, Delmar boulevard and Hamilton avenue, was raided by Enforcement Agent Nations and policemen under a blanket search warrant, today filed petition in Federal Court for restoration of a silver flask containing a quantity of whisky, which was taken from him by officers during the raid.

Besides the eight customers, 15 employes of the cafe were named in warrants issued following the raid. Lurie contends that his flask was taken illegally and without due process of law. The case brought by Lurie will constitute a test of the constitutionality of the blanket search warrants process recently adopted by Nations. The petition probably will be officially presented to Federal Judge Faris Tuesday.

STORMS ON NORTH ATLANTIC DELAY HARVEY'S STEAMER

Berengaria, Majestic and Many Other Ships Are Fighting Heavy Gales.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Gales yesterday continued to whip the North Atlantic into mountains and canyons. Anxiety is felt for the freighter Bretonia, which sailed for this port from St. Pierre, Dec. 12.

The Berengaria, bearing Ambassador Harvey back to Washington from London, is one of the vessels held up. Due here yesterday, she reported that she still was 817 miles off this port and did not expect to reach quarantine until tomorrow morning.

Waves were also lashing the sides of the giant Majestic, carrying the British financial mission to the United States, and Emile Coue, proponent of autosuggestion, bound here for a lecture tour.

The Heinrich Kayser, a German freighter, in the last wireless received from her was reported in distress in a gale with her rudder chain broken and hatches badly damaged. That was 23 days ago. She was bound for Hamburg. Her crew is believed to have numbered about thirty.

JOSEPH NUGENT, WEALTHY EAST ST. LOUIS STOCKMAN, DIES

Vice President of Campbell-Reid Co. Succumbs to Tuberculosis in El Paso.

Joseph Nugent, 61 years old, wealthy vice president of the Campbell-Reid Western Sales Stable Co., National Stock Yards, and one of the foremost stockmen in America, died today at El Paso, Tex., where he had been for three months suffering from tuberculosis.

During the war Nugent was in charge of a great horse and mule market at Des Moines, Ia., where he bought and shipped to warring countries thousands of animals for war uses. He had the reputation locally of having sold more mules and horses to the United States Government and foreign Governments than any man in the United States.

His wife and one daughter, Mrs. Tony Strohm, and his brother, George Nugent, are in El Paso. The body is expected here Tuesday and funeral arrangements are waiting on word from the family.

Nugent was born in Ontario, Canada. He came to East St. Louis about 25 years ago from Indiana. For many years he was connected with the Holland-Nugent-Maxwell Co., dealers in mules and horses. He joined the Campbell-Reid firm in 1916 and was in charge of one of their departments. Nugent was reputed to be a millionaire, his fortune being made here as a trader in livestock. In 1920 his younger daughter, Marion, married his chauffeur and Nugent announced he would break the match. But he and his son-in-law later became reconciled. His other daughter is Mrs. James L. Chesney of 1368A St. Clair avenue, East St. Louis. The Nugent home is at 1205 Lotta avenue, East St. Louis.

Death Sentence for 6 Men Affirmed.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 30.—The death sentence, twice imposed on six Italian nationals on charges of murder in connection with an attempt to rob a bank in the strawberry section of Tangipahoa Parish, was affirmed yesterday by the State Supreme Court.

2000 PER CENT STOCK DIVIDEND DECLARED

Landis Machine Co. Increases Capital Stock From $50,000 to $1,000,000

A 2000 per cent stock dividend was declared yesterday by the board of directors of the Landis Machine Co., whose plant for the manufacture of shoe machinery is at 201 East Gano avenue. The capital stock of the company thereby was increased from $50,000 to $1,000,000.

E. M. Primeau, secretary, said that for nearly 30 years a part of the profits had been put into a surplus fund and that the stock dividend was from that surplus. The assets of the company total $1,609,667 and the liabilities $236,828.

Other capitalization increases recorded yesterday in the office of the Recorder of Deeds were:

The Wahl Commission Co. from $200,000 to $350,000; Condie-Bray Glass and Paint Co. from $250,000 to $500,000; Moss & Lorenhaupt Cigar Co., $70,000 to $150,000; Antrim Lumber Co. from $500,000 to $800,000; Christmann Veneer and Lumber Co. from $25,000 to $150,000; G. T. Riddle Real Estate Co. from $25,000 to $300,000; Gregson Furniture Co. from $50,000 to $150,000, and the Boggs Broom Corn Co. from $60,000 to $180,000.

WOODROW WILSON WISHES COOLIDGE A HAPPY NEW YEAR

Former President Sends Greeting in Return for Letter Transmitting Senate's Felicitations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Former President Wilson wished Vice President Coolidge a happy New Year today in return for the letter of greeting sent by Coolidge in transmitting the Senate resolution congratulating the former President on his sixty-sixth birthday. Mr. Wilson sent this note:

"The very gracious letter with which you are so kind as to accompany the resolution of the Senate of the twenty-eighth of December has given me genuine pleasure. It pleases me very greatly to receive so generous and expression of your kind sentiment, and I beg to express the hope that the new year will contain for Mrs. Coolidge and you every genuine satisfaction and lasting contentment."

The former President sent to Felix Cordova Davila, resident Commissioner of Porto Rico the following reply to a birthday greeting from him: "I have the welfare of the Porto Rican people very much at heart, and am glad to think of myself as a fellow citizen of theirs. Accept my cordial best wishes."

Syracuse (N. Y.) Man Discovers Wife and Children Killed by Gas.

By the Associated Press.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 30.—Mrs. Catherine R. Simone and her four young children were asphyxiated by gas escaping from a kitchen range and a water heater at their home early today. Mrs. Simone evidently was preparing breakfast for her husband, a night worker, when all were overcome. He discovered the bodies upon his return home. He was so overwhelmed by the tragedy that he was removed to a hospital.

HARDING FREES 8 I. W. W. IF THEY WILL LEAVE U. S.

President Conditionally Commutes Sentences of Prisoners Convicted in the Haywood Case.

MEN ARE SUBJECT TO DEPORTATION

Clemency Will Be Void and They Will Be Returned to Prison if They Ever Reenter America.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—The sentences of eight members of the Industrial Workers of the World, convicted in the Haywood case of conspiracy and violation of war-time laws, were commuted by President Harding today to expire at once on condition that the eight prisoners leave the United States and never return.

The men whose sentences were commuted were: Aurello Vincenti Azuara, sentenced to 20 years; C. J. Bourg, 10 years; Peter Green, 10 years; Charles L. Lambert, 20 years; Harry Lloyd, five years; Burt Lorton, 10 years; Sam Scarlett, 20 years; Archie Sinclair, 10 years.

All of the men are subject to deportation and it was a condition or their commutation that should they return to this country the clemency granted would be void and they would be apprehended and returned to Leavenworth penitentiary to serve out the remainder of their sentences.

The prisoners will be given 60 days in which to arrange for their departure and will be required to give bond on their departure from prison that they will appear at a stated time and surrender themselves for deportation.

Provision in Lawyer's Will for Residence for President Must Be Accepted Within Two Years.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 30.—Provisions for the erection of a summer White House for the use of the President of the United States are made in the will of J. Wilson Leakin, a lawyer. The will was probated yesterday in the Orphans' Court here.

For the purchase of land and the erection of the summer White House, $200,000 is left to the United States of America. The site is to be within automobiling distance of Washington. If the legacy is not accepted by Congress within 18 months after Leakin's death the $200,000 is to become part of the residue of the estate.

NORTH FOLE SHIFTING POSITION

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The earth is wobbling on its axis, according to Col. P. Jensen, the Danish scientist, who returned recently from a degree measuring expedition into Greenland. He reports that Greenland is moving westward at the rate of 20 yards a year. This seems to confirm the recent reports of surprising climatic changes at the North Pole.

It is now established that there is a periodic shifting of the latitude of the North Pole. The movement is difficult to detect because of the small area of the pole—about the size of a tennis court. Some authorities say that the poles are gradually changing their positions, and that this alteration to the world's axis will in time mean that regions which are at present ice-bound will become warm and habitable countries.

200 CAPITALIZATION INCREASES

State Has Collected More Than $30,000 in Last Three Weeks.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 30.—Capitalization increases by more than 200 corporations in Missouri in the last three weeks were announced by the Secretary of State's offices. The State collected more than $30,000. The increases were from 10 to 3400 per cent and from a few thousand to $6,000,000.

The majority of the capitalization increases came from St. Louis and Kansas City, it was said. An outstanding case was that of the J. W. Jenkins Sons Music Co. of Kansas City which filed notice with the Secretary of State that the firm's capitalization had been increased from $100,000 to $3,500,000. The corporation franchise tax paid to the State amounted to $1700.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF WAR UNDER WILSON INDICTED FOR FRAUD

INDICTED FOR FRAUD

BENEDICT CROWELL.

Benedict Crowell and Six "Dollar-a-Year" Men Named by Grand Jury Investigating War-Time Frauds in Connection With Camp Construction.

CONTRACTS LET UNDER "COST PLUS" SYSTEM

Amounts Involved in Alleged Conspiracy Are Expected to Run Into Hundreds of Millions of Dollars—System Right, Says Baker.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Benedict Crowell, Assistant Secretary of War under the Wilson administration, and six "dollar-a-year" men associated with the Council of National Defense, were indicted here today by the special grand jury investigating war frauds, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government in construction of war-time army camps and cantonments.

The indictment charges a conspiracy to maladminister existing laws and regulations; to control the giving of contracts to friends, associates and clients under the "cost plus" system, which, it is charged, resulted in a loss to the Government of millions of dollars and reduced the morale of labor.

The others indicted are William A. Starrett, Morton C. Tuttle, Clemens W. Lundoff, Clair Foster, John H. McGibbons and James A. Mears.

The indictments are the first big salvo in Attorney-General Daugherty's attack on many war-time contracts which the Department of Justice holds after exhaustive investigation to be fraudulent. Others are expected to follow, and it is estimated that the amounts involved when the Attorney-General's full program is under way will run into hundreds of millions of dollars.

Mass of Evidence Gathered.

Today's indictments came as the result of consideration by the grand jury of a mass of evidence which the Attorney-General has been gathering for 18 months. It was presented by former Representative McCulloch, of Ohio, now a special Assistant Attorney-General.

The indictments, charging 47 overt acts, and applying to all named alike, charge that contractors, their agents, engineers, architects, and officers of the Government entered a conspiracy to set up a system profitable to the contractors and prejudicial to the Government and to control the giving of contracts to friends, associates and clients, past and prospective.

The Emergency Construction Committee of the Council of National Defense, the indictments charge, was used as the vehicle for carrying out the alleged plan. The Government charges that the alleged conspirators used their membership on the committee to unlawfully influence other officers of the United States in the plans and policies for carrying out the war-time construction program; to attain the "cost plus" system to eliminate usual safeguards for the Government and to defeat checking up and supervising the contractors.

Government Lost Millions.

The indictments further charge that the alleged conspirators used their positions for their own gain and assisted contractors in evading the true intent of contracts and in collecting large and unjustifiable fees. As a result of the conspiracy, the indictments charge, the United States Government lost millions of dollars, the morale of labor was reduced, and the Government was deprived of protection during the emergency construction period.

It is further charged that during 1917 and 1918 the alleged conspirators held daily meetings to plan and carry out the details of the alleged conspiracy and even obtained the removal of other officers of the Government who hindered the carrying out of the plans.

Specifically, those indicted are charged with violation of section 37 of the United States penal code which prescribes a fine of $10,000 or two years imprisonment or both; of

SHERIFF AND DEPUTY HELD FOR ALLEGED THEFT OF LIQUOR

Charges Filed by County Jailer at Des Moines, Where Son Had Been Arrested.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Dec. 30.—Winfred E. Robb, former preacher, Polk County Sheriff and hangman, until Jan. 1, and his brother, George, Deputy Sheriff, are under arrest in connection with the alleged theft of $30,000 worth of confiscated liquor from the Polk County jail Wednesday night. The charges were filed by William McMurray, Polk County jailer, after McMurray had been locked out of the jail under the Sheriff's orders, and after McMurray's son had been arrested by orders of Assistant County Attorney Seeburger for alleged complicity in the booze theft.

McMurray charged that Aug. 8 Sheriff Robb sold more than 70 quarts of whisky to L. S. Hill, proprietor of the American Printing and Lithographing Co., prominent Democratic politician. Hill denies purchasing the liquor.

$20,000 PAYROLL IS STOLEN

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 30.—Armed robbers this morning held up the paymaster of the Ferry Cap & Screw Co., and escaped with the $20,000 weekly payroll. The robbers entered the offices of the company with pistols drawn. The paymaster and his armed escort were caught off their guard by the sudden raid.

Two robbers later halted an automobile carrying the Buick Automobile Co. paymaster, threw two men out and escaped with a $7000 payroll.

LAW TO TAKE NEW PLAN ON REPARATIONS TO PARLEY

Proposal Upon Which British Cabinet Passed Judgment Said to Place Germany's Obligations at About One-Third of Amount Named in Versailles Treaty.

BRITISH HOPE FOR FINAL AGREEMENT

Will Ask France to Give Germany Fair Trial Under Proposed Scheme Before Coercive Methods Are Used — Hughes' Speech Said to Have Helped.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Prime Minister Bonar Law will take to the Paris conference of Premiers next week a complete plan upon which the British Cabinet passed judgment yesterday in the hope of obtaining a French agreement for a final settlement of the reparations problem, it was announced in British official quarters today.

Details of Bonar Law's plan were not available, but it is believed it will set down Germany's total obligations at approximately one-third the Versailles treaty figures.

The British desire that the French give Germany a fair trial, under the the new scheme under which, if it does not produce the desired results, would be supplemented by French schemes involving coercive methods.

It was stated in official circles this forenoon that it was believed the speech delivered by Secretary of State Hughes in New Haven last night, would be helpful to the Paris conference.

Germany May Offer Mortgage on Wealth and Four-Power Pact

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 30.—A mortgage on the wealth of German people up to 20 per cent of its total value is the guiding principle of the reparations proposals which Germany will make to the Premiers' conference, according to the version of the German plan given by Lucien Chassaigne, foreign editor of the Journal.

The mortgage, the writer says, would be established by means of income tax returns. Small business would make direct payments on the obligation, but in the case of large concerns special shares of nonvoting stock having preference in the profits would be created. All these shares would be centered in a bank in Holland or Switzerland, managed by a mixed control board presided over by a neutral.

Such a mortgage, M. Chassaigne says, is estimated by the Germans as able to produce 30,000,000,000 gold marks. In return, however, Chancellor Cuno, the article declares, will ask for abrogation of those clauses of the Versailles treaty which limit German commercial activity.

Although France accepts the principle of a mortgage on German wealth, the editor says that Herr Cuno's figure is much too small, inasmuch as the French share in the total would drop to 16,000,000,000 gold marks, or about half of the amount she has already spent in reconstructing the devastated regions.

International bankers, the writer asserts, are inclined to favor a loan to Germany.

French Plan Ready.

The Petit Parisien learns that the French reparations plan now is ready and that it requires only the approval of Premier Poincare. A meeting of the experts was held at the Foreign Office yesterday, and it is understood that a complete understanding was reached between them and the staff of Marshal Foch, which is charged with providing for possible military consequences.

Rumor of Four-Power Plan.

Reports that Wilhelm Cuno, the German Chancellor, intends to startle the Premiers' conference with definite proposals for a four-Power pact which would guarantee the security of France and the present Franco-German frontiers reached reparations circles today and created considerable comment. This pact, according to the reports, would extend over a period of 30 years. It would be signed by Great Britain, Italy, France and Germany. The United States also would be asked to sign, but without assuming any military obligation.

French officials are said to have already received an outline of the scheme from unofficial sources and there is believed to be little enthusiasm for it, since it is supposed to contain a clause giving any country the right to withdraw within the 30-year period, provided a referendum decides to this effect. Another feature of the reported pact would be the withdrawal within a short time of the troops of occupation. This, it is asserted, would find no support in France.

Germany is keeping her new proposals much in the dark, so far as the Reparations Commission is concerned. The commission has learned, however, that among Chancellor Cuno's proposals will be one to pay a lump sum, somewhere between 5,000,000,000 and 8,000,000,000 gold marks, 1,000,000,000 to be paid at once and the remainder over a period of 10 years. This would be accompanied by a certain form of allied financial control sufficient to insure the balancing of Germany's budget and the stabilization of the mark.

America to Stay Away From Premiers' Conference.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Advices from Paris that the United States Government will not be represented at the meeting of allied Premiers next week were officially confirmed today at the State Department. It was declared the United States never had been represented officially or unofficially at Premiers' conferences.

The State Department today cabled to American Ambassadors and Ministers abroad the full text of that portion of Secretary Hughes' New Haven speech which dealt with reparations and economic conditions. This step will enable American diplomatic representatives to advise foreign governments fully regarding the position of the United States, and will make it in order for the other Powers to express any opinions they may have on the subject.

Text of Hughes' Plan for Independent Commission to Study Reparation Problem

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 30.

THE text of Secretary of State Hughes' suggestion, in a speech before the American Historical Association last night, that an independent commission of financiers could accomplish much toward a solution of the European reparations tangle, follows:

The economic conditions in Europe give us the greatest concern. They have long received the earnest consideration of the administration. It is idle to say that we are not interested in these problems, for we are deeply interested from an economic standpoint, as our credits and markets are involved, and from a humanitarian standpoint, as the heart of the American people goes out to those who are in distress. We cannot dispose of these problems by calling them European, for they are world problems, and we cannot escape the injurious consequences of a failure to settle them.

They are, however, European problems in the sense that they cannot be solved without the consent of European Governments. We cannot consent for them. The key to the settlement is in their hands, not in ours.

Reparations Problem.

The crux of the European situation lies in the settlement of reparations. There will be no adjustment of other needs, however pressing, until a definite and accepted basis for the discharge of reparations claims has been fixed. It is futile to attempt to erect any economic structure in Europe until the foundation is laid.

How can the United States help in this matter? We are not seeking reparations. We are, indeed, asking for the reimbursement of the costs of our army of occupation, and with good reason, for we have maintained our army in Europe at the request of the allies and of Germany and under an agreement that its costs, with like army costs, should be a first charge upon the amounts paid by Germany. Others have been paid and we have not been paid.

But we are not seeking general reparations. We are bearing our own burden and through our loans a large part of Europe's burden in addition. No demands of ours stands in the way of a proper settlement of the reparations question.

Allied Debts to U. S.

Of course, we hold the obligations of European Governments and there has been much discussion abroad and here with respect to them. There has been a persistent attempt ever since the armistice to link up the debts owing to our Government with reparations or with projects of cancellations. This attempt was resisted in a determined manner under the former administration and under the present administration.

The matter is plain enough from our standpoint. The capacity of Germany to pay is not at all affected by any indebtedness of any of the allies to us. That indebtedness does not diminish Germany's capacity and its removal would not increase her capacity. For example, if France had been able to finance her part in the war without borrowing at all from us, that is, by taxation and internal loans, the problem of what Germany could pay would be exactly the same. Moreover, so far as the debtors to the United States are concerned, they have unsettled credit balances, and their conditions and capacity to pay cannot be properly determined until the amount that can be released on these credits for reparations has been determined.

The Debt Commission.

The administration also must consider the difficulty arising from the fact that the question of these obligations which we hold, and what shall be done with them, is not a question within the province of the executive. Not only may Congress deal with public property of this sort, but it has dealt with it. It has created a commission and instead of giving that commission broad powers, such as the administration proposed, which, quite apart from cancellation, might permit a sound discretion to be exercised in accordance with the facts elicited, Congress has placed definite restrictions upon the power of the commission in providing for the funding of these debts.

But what is our attitude toward the question of reparations, standing as it does at a distinct question and one which cannot be settled, unless the European Governments concerned are able to agree.

We have no desire to see Germany relieved of her responsibility for the war or of her just obligations to make reparation for injuries due to her aggression. There is not the slightest desire that France shall lose any part of her just claims. On the other hand, we do not wish to see a prostrate Germany. There can be no economic recuperation in Europe unless Germany recuperates. There will be no permanent peace unless economic satisfactions are enjoyed. There must be hope and industry must have promise of reward if there is to be prosperity. We should view with disfavor measures which, instead of producing reparations, would threaten disaster.

No Invitation to Arbitrate.

Some of our own people have suggested that the United States should assume the role of arbiter. There is one sufficient answer to this suggestion and that is that we have not been asked to assume the role of arbiter. There could be no such arbitrament, unless it were invited, and it would be an extraordinary and unparalleled thing for us to ask for such an invitation.

I do not think that we should endeavor to take such a burden of responsibility. We have quite enough to bear without drawing to ourselves all the ill feeling which would result from disappointed hopes and a settlement which was viewed as forced upon nations by this country which at the same time is demanding the payment of its debts.

But the situation does call for a settlement upon its merits. The first condition of a satisfactory settlement is that the question should be taken out of politics. Statesmen have their difficulties, their public opinion, the exigencies which they must face. It is devoutly to be hoped that they will effect a settlement among themselves and that the coming meeting in Paris will find a solution. But if it does not, what should be done? The alternative of forcible measures to obtain reparations is not an attractive one. No one can foretell the extent of the serious consequences which might ensue from such a course. Apart from political results, I believe that the opinion of experts is that such measures will not produce reparation payments, but might tend to destroy the basis of those payments which must be found in economic recuperation.

"Limit Must Be Fixed."

If, however, statesmen cannot agree and such an alternative is faced, what can be done? Is there not another way out? The fundamental condition is that in this critical moment the merits of the question, as an economic one, must alone be regarded. Sentiment, however natural, must be disregarded; mutual recriminations are of no avail; reviews of the past, whether accurate or inaccurate, promise nothing; assertions of blame on the one hand, and excuses on the other come to naught.

There ought to be a way for statesmen to agree upon what Germany can pay, for no matter what claims may be made against her, that is the limit of satisfaction. There ought to be a way to determine that limit and provide a financial plan by which immediate results can be obtained and the European nations can feel that the foundation has been laid for their mutual and earnest endeavors to bring about the utmost prosperity to which the industry of their people entitles them.

If statesmen cannot agree and exigencies of public opinion make their course difficult, then there should be called to their aid those who can point the way to a solution.

Proposal of Commission.

Why should they not invite men of the highest authority in finance in their respective countries—men of such prestige, experience and honor that their agreement upon the amount to be paid, and upon a financial plan for working out the payments, would be accepted throughout the world as the most authoritative expression obtainable? Governments need not bind themselves in advance to accept the recommendations, but they can at least make possible such an inquiry with their approval and free the men who may represent their country in such a commission from any responsibility to foreign offices and from any duty to obey political instructions. In other words, they may invite an answer to this difficult and pressing question from men of such standing and in such circumstances of freedom as will insure a reply prompted only by knowledge and conscience.

I have no doubt that distinguished Americans would be willing to serve on such a commission. If governments saw fit to reject the recommendation upon which such a body agreed, they would be free to do so, but they would have the advantage of impartial advice and of an enlightened public opinion. Peoples would be informed, the question would be rescued from assertion and counter-assertion, and the problem put upon its way to solution.

Benefits From Step.

I do not believe that any general conference would answer the purpose there, much less that any political conference would accomplish a result which premiers find it impossible to reach. But I do believe that a small group given proper freedom of action, would be able soon to devise a proper plan. It would be time enough to consider forcible measures after such an opportunity had been exhausted. Such a body would not only be expert, but friendly. It would not be bound by special official obligations; it would have no animus and no duty but to find and state the truth. In a situation which requires an absence of technicality and immunity from interference, I hope that the way may soon be found for a frank discussion and determination of what is essentially an economic problem.

The United States has the most friendly and disinterested purpose in this matter and wishes to aid in any practicable way. But it is idle to make suggestions which arouse false hopes and are so impracticable that they cannot bear fruit. On the other hand, there lies open a broad avenue of opportunity if those whose voluntary action is indispensable are willing to take advantage of it. And once this is done the avenues of American helpfulness cannot fail to open hopefully.

HUGHES PROPOSES AN INDEPENDENT REPARATIONS BODY

Secretary Expresses Belief American Financiers Would Work With Others to Solve Problem.

SEES DANGER IF PREMIERS DISAGREE

First Condition of Appointment of Commission Would Be That Negotiations Be Free From Politics.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 30.—France has made an intensive study of the reparations question for the last four years and is convinced that Germany does not want to restore her financial stability if such a step means payment in full of a reasonable war indemnity. Such is the authoritative, though unofficial, comment on the speech of the American Secretary of State at New Haven last night.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Disclosure by Secretary Hughes in his New Haven speech before the American Historical Association last night, of the belief of the Washington Government that an independent international commission of financiers, including Americans, might well be called in to recommend a method of settlement for the reparations crisis, apparently leaves the next move in the hands of the allied Premiers.

The American suggestion, Hughes specified, was offered as an alternative in the event that the Premiers at their Paris meeting, beginning next Tuesday, fail to find a basis for adjustment "among themselves."

The Secretary stressed the view that settlement by the Premiers was to be hoped for. He pointed out that falling such an agreement the world might be facing the employment of forcible means to collect reparations from Germany, and outlined the danger to world peace the American Government foresaw in that course.

Collection by Force Opposed.

The plain warning to allied statesmen that the United States could not look with favor on attempted forcible collection was reiterated by Hughes in his address, and the financial commission plan put forward as an alternative that would "open hopefully" the way for American helpfulness.

As a first condition of appointment of an economic commission, however, Hughes specified that the whole question of Germany's capacity to pay and methods of payment must be "taken out of politics." He proposed that the distinguished financiers recommend not only a plan of payment, but also that the amount to be paid be freed of the domination of foreign offices and the necessity of obeying political instructions.

(The text of Secretary Hughes' discussion of foreign economic problems is printed elsewhere in the Post-Dispatch today.)

American Members of Commission Would Be Nominated by Government.

Appointment of American financiers to sit upon a commission such as suggested by Secretary Hughes in his address at New Haven, would be on nomination of the Government, if the proposal for this method of adjusting the reparations dispute should be accepted abroad. This was the view expressed authoritatively in White House circles in connection with Hughes' remarks.

It was pointed out that any body of an advisory character to deal with the question of the amount of reparations Germany could and should pay must meet under the sanction of all Governments involved, if its work was to bear fruit. While no light was thrown upon preliminary conversations that may have been held between the Washington and the allied Governments relative to the plan of operation Hughes has disclosed, the impression given in White House circles was that such conversations had taken place and that there was reason to believe the allied Premiers would not be found opposed to the suggestion if, as Hughes pointed out, they failed to reach a reparations agreement among themselves.

There is no question that the United States expects to be invited to nominate members to sit on the financiers' commission should that be the course adopted by the allied Governments toward settlement. The American members and those of other countries, it was indicated, would of necessity represent their Governments in whatever steps might be necessary to make sure that purely nonpolitical consideration was given by them to the problem and that it was viewed strictly from the economic standpoint.

NEW PLEA BY U. S. FOR REFUGEES AT NEAR EAST PARLEY

Request That Provision Be Made for Armenians Who Fled to Return to Homes in Turkey.

BRITISH PLAN IS DROPPED

Proposal Had Been Made That League of Nations Agent, Supervise Treatment of Minorities.

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Dec. 30.—The Turks are sending reinforcements in the direction of Mosul, the rich oil district, the ownership of which is in dispute at the Lausanne peace conference, according to advices to the Central News from a reliable source. A division of 6000 Turkish troops, it is stated, has already left Van for Mosul.

By the Associated Press.

LAUSANNE, Dec. 30.—America made another appeal yesterday in behalf of the Near East refugees, when the delegates representing the United States at the Near East peace conference presented an earnest plea that in the general amnesty arrangements to be negotiated with Turkey suitable provision be made for Armenian and other refugees who fled from Turkey and may wish to return to their homes. The Americans asked that Turkey engage to restore to these refugees their property.

What action the entente nations will take on the plea of Armenia for a national home in Turkey will probably be decided today. The delegates of Great Britain, France and Italy will consider the petition which the Armenians presented to the conference a few days ago.

No progress was made yesterday by the sub-committee on minorities, before which the American appeal was presented when general questions of amnesty were under discussion. The jurists to whom the amnesty clause of the proposed treaty was submitted reported they were unable to agree, as both the Turks and Greeks had interjected too many controversial political considerations.

Confronted by persistent Turkish objections, the sub-commission voted to drop the British amendment stipulating the appointment of a League of Nations representative to supervise Turkey's treatment of minorities.

The conference deadlock on the big issues continues; apparently Angora must speak before the Ottoman delegates can make concessions of a nature to ease the present delicate position of the peace negotiations.

HOMICIDE VERDICT ON KILLING OF YOUTH OUTSIDE THEATER

Melvin Hendrix Held Under $10,000 Bond for Shooting Vincent Richardson.

A Coroner's verdict of homicide was returned today holding Melvin Hendrix, 19, of 2327A Lafayette avenue, for shooting Vincent T. Richardson, 17, of 1011 Ohio avenue, Thursday night outside a motion picture theater at Jefferson and Chouteau avenues during a fight growing out of Richardson's use of profanity and obscene language in the theater within the hearing of a young woman whom Hendrix was escorting.

A bond of $10,000 was fixed for Hendrix. Harry Zitger, 17, of 2794 Chouteau avenue, and Kenneth Shelton, 17, of 2635A Brannon avenue, companions of Richardson, were held under $1000 bond as witnesses for the Circuit Attorney.

Hendrix insisted upon making a statement to the jury over the advice of his counsel, who left the room when he began his story. His relation of events preceding the shooting was identical with that made to the police. He said Richardson started the fight and that he fired only after he warned Richardson that he would if he did not cease his attack.

U. S. STAND IN LIQUOR CASES

Brief Declares Foreign Lines' Appeal Cannot Be Acted On.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—The Federal Government, in a brief filed in the Supreme Court today, held that the appeals of the foreign steamship lines against the recent prohibition decision of Judge Hand at New York had failed to show that the United States had consented to be sued, and that the cases therefore could not be prosecuted.

The Government also insisted that the Court did not have jurisdiction, for the further reasons that the appeals "do not present a cause of action in equity under the Constitution of the United States" and "Do not disclose a cause of action equitable in its nature, civil in its character and arising under the Constitution of the United States."

The prohibition amendment and the enforcement act require the application of prohibition to every place where the United States may exercise jurisdiction, the Government declared.

PLANS FOR ARMENIAN NATIONAL HOME PRESENTED BY AMERICANS AT LAUSANNE

By the Associated Press.

LAUSANNE, Dec. 30.—PLANS for an Armenian national home, financed by a possible $20,00,000 appropriation by the United States Congress or a popular loan in America, in addition to funds from other countries, were presented to the Near East peace conference today by the American delegation.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—The proposal for establishment of a national home land for the Armenians, financed in the United States, was presented to the Lausanne conference at the request of American philanthropical organizations, not as a proposal of the Washington Government. There is little doubt that the Government has indicated through Ambassador Child that it would like to see the Armenians given some such protection, but officials here say they are not committed to any specific plan. The legislation on the subject pending in Congress is not part of an administration program.

scorn at the command of an always facile tongue.

He played ironically with the word "conference." During the war, he said, the American people were "fascinated by phrases," and some of them were still enthralled by the "wizardry of words." That was a dig at Wilson. The pith of his remarks was that it would be futile and dangerous for the United States to call a conference on the economic situation in Europe. It would only hold out false hopes, whose dissipation would enhance the present bad feeling in the world. Addressing Borah directly, he said that he (Johnson), was "fighting, fighting, fighting to keep America out of the mad adventures of Europe." When Johnson sat down, Senator Reed of Missouri went over to his desk and congratulated him on the speech.

Reply by Borah.

Borah replied that the United States was closely affected by European conditions and that they could not grow worse without the United States feeling the evil consequences. Replying to the derision heaped by the Californian on the conference idea, Borah said that not all conferences had ended in failure. He recalled Roosevelt's intervention to end the war between Russian and Japan and the calling of the second Hague conference at the instance of the same American President.

Johnson had declaimed against the proposed economic conference on the ground that the United States would be morally if not legally committed to enforce its decisions. Borah, in reply, cited the second Hague convention, which contained the express stipulation that nothing in it should require the United States to entangle itself in the political affairs of Europe.

Borah cited also the conference held at Algeciras in 1907, and attended by representatives of the United States, who were not merely "observers," but took an official and active part in the proceedings. "The idea of observers," said Borah, "had not occurred to the fertile mind of the President."

American leadership in the Algeciras conference, he continued, solved difficulties which had seemed insuperable; it had averted a threatened war between France and Germany that would probably have drawn in other nations.

Opposes Permanent League.

Borah said the views he was expressing were not inconsistent with his fight against the league. He had often said, he continued, that he "had no doubt as to the responsibility and as to the obligation of this Government with reference to effecting peace throughout the world."

What he objected to was a permanent league that would bind the United States in advance of conditions that might arise at any particular time. He recalled that the "round-robin" signed by him with other Republican Senators in 1919 during the Paris peace negotiations declared it to be the sense of the Senate that the nations of the world should unite to promote peace and general disarmament. How could they unite, he asked, except by conference?

For Johnson's benefit he quoted a plank from the Progressive platform on which the Californian ran for the Vice Presidency in 1912, a plank declaring for peaceful methods in the settlement of international disputes instead of war. He read a similar plank from the Republican platform of 1920, specifically indorsing the idea of conferences as against a permanent League of Nations. Borah said that he had made a special plea at the time to have that inserted in the platform. Referring to the presence of American "observers" at Lausanne, and in the reparations commission, Borah said it was "an humiliation and a disgrace to the United States that whenever a conference is held in Europe, we snoop around and look in."

"I do not understand those who say there is nothing here (in the European situation) which concerns us," said Borah.

"That is a blindness which is incomprehensible. I do not believe that it is possible to escape from its consequences. I think it is true, as I have heretofore said, that we are even now in the midst of it, that we are a part of it, that we are actually dealing with it at the present time and must continue to deal with it in one way or another, until matters are finally adjusted."

Borah said he did not wish to embarrass the Secretary of State in the least, but he believed that the power of public opinion had a function to perform just as it had with reference to disarmament.

"The whole human family, scarred and tortured, prays for peace, and yet there is no peace," he concluded. "When shall we cease to live in this atmosphere of war? When shall we escape from the spell of war? When shall we loosen the grip of the monster?

"This is the most stupendous problem in the world today. Beside this question all other questions are subsidiary and incidental. Without a solution, and a favorable solution of this riddle, human progress becomes a misfortune, the inventions of the human mind a curse and civilization, so-called, an alluring trap into which men and women are ensnared to a death of unspeakable torture."

NATIONALIZATION OF MINES ADVOCATED

U. M. W. of A. Commission Plan Estimated Cost at $4,500,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—A plan for nationalization of all coal mines in the United States prepared by a fact-finding committee of the United Workers of America was made public last night before the League for Industrial Democracy, by C. J. Golden of Shamokin, Pa., president of District No. 9, U. M. W. of A.

The plan contemplates purchase of the mines, both anthracite and bituminous, at a total cost to the Government of $4,500,000,000. This figure was based upon a present estimated private investment of between one and a half and two billion dollars in soft coal properties plus approximately two billion in anthracite mines.

To bring such Federal ownership, the fact finding committee would, according to Golden, recommend an Interstate Commission of Mines, at the head of which would be a Secretary of Mines, with a seat in the Cabinet.

Appointments to this commission would be made by the President and professional and industrial associations. Its duties would include scientific determination of costs of production, the fixing of prices to the consumer, the negotiation of freight rates, distribution of the product of the mines and the accumulation of facts concerning every phase of the industry.

Administration and operation would be delegated to a national mining council composed of a financial group, a technical group, a group to include administrative officials of the industry and a fourth made up of miners and consumers. All would be appointed by the Interstate Commission.

The plan as outlined frankly contemplated the birth of a political labor party to assure its successful operation. It would, said Golden, be essential in bringing political influence to bear on the governmental commissions toward protecting the interests of the miners.

The miners designate the proposed program "the American plan."

STATUS OF GERMAN RELIEF FUND

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—Relief funds at present available are sufficient to supply one meal daily from now until March 31 to 475,900 German children and youths, as well as new or expectant mothers, according to a semi-official announcement.

Organized American aid, thus far this winter amounts to $250,000, including $100,000 recently sent by the New York Central Committee for Relief of Distressed Germany and Austria. In addition to this amount, the German Government has appropriated 1,750,000,000 marks for feeding purposes.

LEMP FUNERAL TOMORROW FROM BREWERY OFFICE

pondence she and Lemp had discussed briefly.

Just after she left his office, the secretary testified, she heard a sound as if something had been dropped or fallen. She did not recognize the noise as shots, but apparently the office porter did, she said, because upon her return to Lemp's office, she found him stretched out on the floor in the northwest corner.

Lemp had shot himself in the heart. A revolver was near his right hand. The inquest disclosed that Lemp had shot himself only once. Superficial examination yesterday seemingly disclosed two wounds half an inch apart and there were two empty shells in the revolver. One, however, was carried empty as a safety precaution.

Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery. The services at the office will be private.

Man Dead, Gas Tube in Mouth.

Roomers at 719 South Vandeventer avenue, attracted to a second-floor rear room at 6 a. m. today by the odor of gas, found Tony Yudash, 45 years old, a laborer, dead in bed with one end of a rubber tube in his mouth and the other end attached to a gas jet in the room. A number of letters, written in Croatian, his native language, were found in his room and $22 was in his trousers' pockets.

YOUNG TALKS WITH GOVERNOR REGARDING POLICE BOARD JOB

Hyde Says He Is Undecided on Course as to Confirmation of Young as Commissioner.

William Young, member of the Board of Police Commissioners, was in conference with Gov. Hyde at Jefferson City yesterday regarding reports that his name will not be sent for confirmation to the State Senate during the session which convenes Wednesday. This automatically would remove Young from the board.

As exclusively told in the Post-Dispatch Dec. 5, for some time there have been reports of friction between members of the Police Board because of Young's apparent friendliness to Victor J. Miller, treasurer of the board, who was deposed as its president following his unsubstantiated charge that immoral clubs of boys and girls existed among students of Soldan High School.

Gov. Hyde said last night that he had not decided what course would be taken regarding Young, who was appointed for a four-year term, beginning Jan. 1, last. Philip Brockman, president of the board, repeatedly has denied that friction between the members exists.

LEGION TO AID IN CAMPAIGN FOR THE BOND ISSUE

With Other Patriotic Organizations Support Will Be Given Especially to Item for $6,000,000 Memorial Plaza.

SEEMING CONFLICT OF ITEMS EXPLAINED

If Plaza Provision Wins, Bonds Will Not Be Issued for Sites for Courthouse and Auditorium.

Organizations to campaign for the municipal bond issue, particularly the item providing $6,000,000 for a memorial plaza and memorial building or monument, are being formed by the American Legion and by all other veteran and patriotic societies affiliated with the Veteran's Council.

Committees of the two campaign divisions will co-operate, and also will work in connection with the central campaign organization formed by the General Council on Civic Needs. The 21 items in the $88,372,500 program will be voted on in a special election Feb. 9.

The campaign work was divided between the Legion and the other veteran organizations to assure a more thorough campaign in reaching all former service men and members of the various auxiliaries and patriotic societies.

Post commanders, adjutants and representatives of all such organizations, other than the American Legion, will meet Friday evening in the Chamber of Commerce assembly hall to discuss the memorial plaza item and the remainder of the bond-issue program. Plans for the campaign within each of the veteran groups will be made.

Conference Jan. 10.

A similar conference will be held the evening of Jan. 10 at the Marquette Hotel by post commanders, adjutants and delegates from all American Legion posts in the city.

It is planned to dedicate the proposed memorial plaza and building, or monument, to the memory of the soldiers and sailors who have served in all wars of the United States

The memorial plaza item in the bond-issue ordinance reads that the bonds are to be issued to provide a plaza and memorial structure in appreciation of the services rendered by the citizen soldiers of Missouri in the World War, and to preserve the records of their achievements.

The ordinance was drafted in this form, it was said, to place the item within the provisions of a State law enabling cities to vote bonds for world war memorials. Ben H. Charles, expert bond attorney, who drafted the ordinance, recently gave the General Council on Civic Needs an opinion that the plaza and memorial structure could be dedicated to the service men of all wars of the United States.

10 Blocks in Proposed Site.

The site of the proposed plaza includes 10 city blocks, adjoining the City Hall-Municipal Courts Building group. It takes in six blocks between Market, Pine, Twelfth and Fifteenth streets; one block, fronting the Central Public Library, bounded by Pine, Olive, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets; one block, suggested as a site for the proposed new courthouse, bounded by Market, Chestnut, Eleventh and Twelfth streets and two blocks, suggested as a site for the proposed Municipal Auditorium, bounded by Fourteenth, Fifteenth, and extending about two-thirds of the depth south from Market to Clark. (The latter plot, in reality one block, is carried on the city plats as two city blocks).

Items of $5,000,000 each for the courthouse and Municipal Auditorium include provision for purchase of sites for these buildings, as these items are separate from the Memorial Plaza item.

This apparent duplication of provision for sites for the two buildings, involving about $2,000,000, was explained today by E. J. Russell, chairman of the City Plan Commission and member of the executive committee of the General Council on Civic Needs, and Louis P. Aloe, president of the Board of Aldermen, and chairman of the Special Bond Issue Committee of the board, both asserting that if all three items were approved, the approximately $2,000,000 in bonds represented by the apparent duplication in site would not be issued.

Aloe said provision for purchase of sites had been made in the Courthouse and Municipal Auditorium items, in order to assure authority for the purchase of ground if one or both of these items are passed and the Memorial Plaza item should be rejected. This, he said, makes each of the three items independent of the others and would assure completion of any one of the three items if that one passed and the other two were not approved.

If the three items are approved, he said, the bonds which otherwise would be issued to buy sites for the Courthouse and Municipal Auditorium would not be issued.

Russell concurred in this, stating this was the position of the General Council on Civic Needs. He said it was the understanding of the Executive Committee of the Council that the bonds for purchasing sites for the Courthouse and Auditorium would not be issued, if those two items are approved and the plaza item carries. This will be safeguarded, he said, by the Citizens' Supervisory Committee, which will have supervision over the expenditure of bond issue funds.

Provisions of Ordinance.

He pointed out that the bond issue ordinance provides that the bonds voted under each of the various items may be used only for the purposes set out in that item. If the plaza item carried, affording sites for the Courthouse and Auditorium, and those two items are approved, bond funds which otherwise would have been used to buy sites for the Courthouse and Auditorium could not be devoted to any other purposes, he said. Specific amounts for the sites are not set out in the Courthouse and Auditorium items, but are included in the plaza estimates.

The city now owns the larger part of the block bounded by Market, Chestnut, Eleventh and Twelfth, which was the site of the old City Hall, and if the plaza item is approved would have to buy only a section of the block adjacent to Twelfth, between Market and Chestnut.

Merchant Who Gave $1,000,000 Business to His Employes

HENRY A. DIX, founder of the firm of Henry A. Dix & Sons Co., manufacturers of dresses and nurses' uniforms, recently announced he had turned over to his 400 employes his entire business, which they will operate themselves. Dix, who is 73 years old, came from Russia 30 years ago, and started a small clothing business which he developed into the present nationally known concern. He declared recently he had made all the money he needed, turned over the entire plant to the workers, gave them a cash bequest of $250,000 on which to operate, and offered his service in advisory capacity as chairman of the Board of Directors at an annual salary of 50 cents. The photograph shows him with some of the employes who will share in the business.

4660 New Voters on Registration Books.

Revision of the registration books for the special election Feb. 9 on the municipal bond issue, to be started Tuesday by the Board of Election Commissioners and close Friday, is expected to cut the present total of 274,948 down to a figure between 260,000 and 265,000. The revised total will represent the number of voters eligible to vote on the $88,372,500 bond issue.

The special registration Thursday was extremely light, the final report compiled by the Election Commissioners today showing 4660 persons signed the books in the 618 precincts. The Twenty-eighth Ward had the high registration, with 344. The Fifth Ward was low with 54.

At the office of the Election Commissioners an estimate was made that at least 15,000 names would be removed from the registration books during the revision, representing persons who have moved since last registering, or who cannot be located at the addresses shown for them on the books.

A canvass of the precincts to check removals was started yesterday by the election clerks and will be completed today.

various other sections of the revised statutes; of certain army regulations and sections of the army appropriation bills of 1916 and 1917.

Ground for Charges.

In a voluminous indictment, the Government gives the historical ground for the charges, sets out what the alleged conspirators proposed to do; how they planned to carry out the alleged conspiracy and enumerates what are alleged to be certain overt acts which effectuated their purposes and objects.

Starrett was a member of the firm of Starrett and Van Vleck, and formerly of the Thompson-Starrett Co. Since the war he has been associated with the George A. Fuller company. He was chairman of the Emergency Construction Co. of the Council of National Defense.

Tuttle was general manager of the Aberthaw Construction Co., and frequently acted as chairman of the Emergency Construction Committee, the indictment says. Lundoff was vice president and general manager of the Crowell-Lundoff-Little Co., and general manager of Cleveland Construction Committee.

Crowell Was Head of Company.

Crowell, prior to the war, was president of the Crowell, Lundoff-Little Co., and later was Assistant Secretary of War. Foster prior to the war, the indictment says, was associated with various construction and engineering concerns, and with Starrett was associated with the Thompson-Starrett Co., and the George A. Fuller Co.

McGibbons, prior to the war and up to March, 1918, represented a bonding company issuing bonds for contracting and engineering concerns, and was associated with the Emergency Construction Committee from May, 1917, to about March 5, 1918. Mears, prior to and since the war, the indictment says, was general manager of the Fred T. Ley & Co., Inc., general contractors, the company to which was given the first contract for a cantonment—Camp Devens, Mass. Mears was associated with the construction commission until Sept. 6, 1917, acting at times as secretary of the committee.

One of the many charges contained in the indictment is that after the end of the war—Armistice day, Nov. 11, 1918—the defendants obligated the Government for $80,000,000 more new cantonment construction work of which everything over $11,000,000 was on the cost plus basis.

Bosch Stock Purchaser Pleads Not Guilty of Perjury.

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Martin E. Kern, alleged "dummy" purchaser of the assets of the Bosch Magneto Co. at a sale by the Alien Property Custodian in 1918, and Joseph F. Guffey, New York director of the sales bureau for the custodian, pleaded not guilty yesterday to perjury charges returned in indictments by a Federal grand jury Thursday. Hearing was set for Jan. 8 and both were released on bond.

Crowell Has Turned All His Records Over to Investigators.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 30.—Benedict Crowell, former Assistant Secretary of War, when told of the Washington indictments, said:

"I know nothing whatever about the indictments and have no information regarding them. I have recently turned over all my records regarding the building of army camps and cantonments development to justice agents and have co-operated with them in every way in their investigations."

Clemons W. Lundoff, also of Cleveland, is said to be in Los Angeles, Cal., attending a convention of general contractors.

Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, when told of the indictments said:

"Not having seen the indictment I cannot comment on them. I have always believed, however, that the cost plus plan was the only possible way the camps and cantonments could have been constructed under the circumstances."

Brothers Fight; One in Hospital.

Albert Knuemann, 26 years old, 1730 Menard street, was taken to city hospital at 9 p. m. yesterday suffering from a stab wound in the left chest and from alcoholism. His brother, Rudolph Knuemann, 21, was arrested. Mrs. Helen Knuemann, mother of the boys, told police her two sons had a fight in the home during the evening.

'GOLD DUST TWINS' ARE RETIRED FROM THEIR PUBLIC JOBS

Goldstein Turns Over Circuit Clerk's Office to John Schmoll and Deputy Bobby Moore Is Out.

NAT IN OFFICE MOST OF TIME FOR 30 YEARS

Lowden Fund Scandal Lost Two Federal Appointments for St. Louis Politician — Still on City Committee.

Today marks the passing from official life of Circuit Clerk Nat Goldstein and his deputy, "Bobbie" Moore, the "gold-dust twins" of Missouri politics.

Goldstein, one-time harness maker, an official or deputy in some capacity almost continuously since 1898 and erstwhile leader of the "Courthouse Ring," is retiring from office at the expiration of his term. He did not seek re-election. He retains his post as Republican Committeeman from the Nineteenth Ward. Robert E. Moore, until today clerk in the Juvenile Court, was not reappointed. His political fortunes have consistently trailed with those of Goldstein.

Goldstein was succeeded today as Circuit Clerk by John Schmoll, former Director of Public Welfare and former chairman of the Republican City Central Committee. Goldstein will devote his time to the insurance business and will have an office at 332 Pierce Building. Moore departed Thursday for a visit in the East. His plans for the future have not been announced.

There was a little celebration at noon in Goldstein's private office, marking the change in administration. The retiring clerk's fellow committeeman, William Hubele of the Seventh Ward, brought a jazz band composed of negro constituents. Several stenographers danced while the band played. Frank Lydick, an attorney, sang two songs, "Call Me Back, Pal of Mine" and "Why Should I Cry Over You?"

There was a crowd of clerks, lawyers and judges looking on, and Schmoll was there. Five new deputies appointed by Schmoll and about 42 who were retained were sworn in by Circuit Judge Landwehr, who administered the oath of office to Schmoll Thursday. Afterwards Schmoll, in a talk to his deputies, said he wanted them to be efficient and helpful to the public.

Goldstein's deputies voluntarily collected about $400 and bought a set of furniture for his new office.

Got $2500 Each.

Goldstein has suffered many political rebuffs since May, 1920, when he and Moore each received $2500 of the $38,000 Lowden Missouri campaign fund. Both were delegates to the Republican national convention. Each at first denied receiving the money, but later, when existence of canceled checks became known, admitted receiving the money, but said they passed it on to others, who spent it.

Both went to the national convention in Chicago in June, although Gov. Lowden had repudiated their support and said they were "not fit to sit in a national convention." Their fame had preceded them. When Missouri's delegation announced "not ready" during roll call on the first ballot, a voice in the south gallery cried: "What's the matter? Still counting the cash?" The convention roared with laughter.

Goldstein came home the next day. He said he had to sign pay roll checks. It was learned subsequently that both Goldstein and Moore had returned their $2500 to the Lowden campaign treasury.

A year later Goldstein was the choice of local Republicans for Postmaster of St. Louis. United States Senator Spencer recommended him. But various organizations, remembering the "$2500 twins," passed resolutions of protest. Goldstein withdrew.

Loses Another Appointment.

Another year passed. Last May the nomination of Goldstein to be Collector of Internal Revenue was sent to the Senate by President Harding. Again Senator Spencer "fronted" for Goldstein. The latter, meanwhile, having the Senator's assurance that he would be confirmed, announced he would not be a candidate to succeed himself as Circuit Clerk.

But memory of the "$2500 twins" lingered. Once more indignant organizations protested. Democratic Senators declared a field day for general condemnation of Republican policies. The Senate Finance Committee, fearful of the storm of opposition and publicity, rescinded its vote to recommend confirmation of the appointment.

Goldstein saved the President from an embarrassing situation by asking that his nomination be withdrawn. It was.

$40,000 Fire in Zeigler, Ill.

By the Associated Press.

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Dec. 30.—The greater part of the business section of Zeigler, near here, was destroyed by fire yesterday. Damage was estimated at $40,000. The blaze is believed to have started from a defective flue.

WET BANQUET IN NEW YORK LEADS TO INDICTMENTS

Alleged Bootleggers to "the 400" Charged With Doing Liquor Business of $1,994,976 in One Year.

GRAND JURY NAMES DISTILLERY OWNERS

Four La Montagne Brothers and Nine Alleged Associates Are Made Defendants on Two Charges.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The first definite step toward exposing the alleged illegal supply of liquor to New York's so-called "400" was taken yesterday when the Federal grand jury returned two indictments to Judge Knox in the Federal District Court.

Investigation by the grand jury into a bachelor's dinner at the fashionable Racquet and Tennis Club on Park avenue, at which liquor was alleged to have flowed freely, is said to have brought indictments.

The indictments accused the four La Montagne Brothers—Montaigu, Rene, Morgan and William—members of the club, and nine others of being involved in the bootlegging. The grand jury was congratulated by Judge Knox.

The defendants, besides the La Montagne Brothers, are Samuel A. Story, Eddie Harlow, Edwin Schuttenberg, James R. Burrows, Joseph S. Burrows, Patrick J. McGee (known also as Patrick McAllister), Rex E. Sheldon, John George and Herbert Morgan. Story, it was said, sailed for Europe soon after Assistant Federal Attorney Clark began his inquiry. The others will be arraigned Tuesday morning.

The indictments, according to a statement by Col. William A. Hayward, Federal Attorney, involve the bootlegging directly by the La Montagnes and their agents this last year of 16,000 gallons of rye whisky, 948 gallons of Scotch, 1500 gallons of gin and 9224 gallons of assorted wines, brandies and other liquors.

Says Director Had Facts.

Col. Hayward, in referring to the alleged wholesale sales of liquor to exclusive clubs and persons of wealth and social standing, said:

"The office of the New York Prohibition Director had most of the facts the grand jury and my office have worked so hard to get, as early as last June, but did not see fit to report the facts to me."

The Prohibition Director in office in June was Ralph A. Day, who resigned Oct. 31.

An additional quantity of liquor, probably still larger, was sold, it was charged, to bootleggers acting on their own account under either forged or purchased permits. This would make the total amount of liquor sold in a year, 55,416 gallons or 221,664 quarts. An average selling price of $9 a quart would fix the alleged amount of business of the defendants at $1,994,976 in a year.

The first indictment contains two counts, one for conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act and one for conspiracy to defraud the Government of taxes. The conspiracy charge includes the operations of the Green River Distilling Co., Eminence Distillery Co., Inc., and E. La Montagne Sons, Inc.

The stock of these three companies is held by the Copperfield Co., Inc. The stock of this company in turn is owned entirely by the four La Montagne brothers.

The indictment alleges the defendants sold whisky of the Green River Distilling Co., Inc., to persons who had no permits for it. The Green River had a wholesale liquor dealers' permit from January, 1920, to November, 1921, when all such permits were cancelled. During this period, it is charged, large quantities of Green River whisky were sold to bootleggers who presented forged and altered permits.

Forged Permits Used.

The whisky of the Eminence Distillery Co., Inc., was sold directly to consumers and the transactions covered by counterfeited and forged permits, it is charged. The sale of the imported wines, gin, Scotch whisky, brandy, etc., of E. La Montagne Sons., Inc., to persons who had no permits, is also alleged.

The defendants are also charged with filing false and perjured monthly internal revenue reports showing the persons to whom liquor was sold during the month. A corresponding charge of having taken up and doing away with forged and counterfeit permits is made.

The second count of the first indictment charges conspiracy to defraud the Government of liquor taxes and income taxes. Whisky was put on the Eminence company's books as sold for $30 a case, whereas La Montagnes sold it to their friends for $110 a case, it is charged.

The second indictment is based on possessing and uttering forged permits and does not include Montaigu La Montagne, Harlow, Schuttenberg or the two Burrows. There are nine counts for possessing various forged permits, two for uttering and one for conspiracy to possess and utter forged permits.

The parts played by the various persons named in the indictment were, according to Col. Hayward:

"Montaigu La Montagne, president of all the corporations; Rene, Morgan and William, officers, stockholders and active salesmen of the liquors.

Samuel A. Story, vice president and general manager of the corporations and of their bootlegging operations. James R. Burrows is a customs bonded truckman with a permit from the prohibition office to carry liquor still in effect. He transported practically all of the liquor illicitly sold.

Joseph S. Burrows, father of James, owns the garage at 648 West Thirty-fourth street, where he stored the liquors for which permits were filed with La Montagnes and which had not yet been delivered to their friends and customers. The garage was recently raided.

"Schuttenberg was a liquor salesman.

"Rex E. Sheldon, Patrick McAllister (alias McGee), John George and Herbert Morgan were professional fixers and vendors of forged permits.

The Club Bootlegger.

"Eddie Harlow was the cigar man at the Racquet and Tennis Club and as one of the agents of the La Montagnes did an extensive bootlegging business with members of that club."

The first knowledge of the alleged conspiracy and wholesale bootlegging operations came to Maj. Clark, Col. Hayward's assistant, about the latter part of September or the first of October. These officials would only say it came from a volunteer witness.

Their informant, it is understood, however, was a former employe of the La Montagnes who had some differences with them regarding financial matters. He is said to have turned over to the Federal authorities minute data concerning the alleged bootlegging.

While prohibition enforcement was occupying the attention of various New York courts, prohibition agents who claimed to have given Broadway the driest Christmas Eve in its history, were planning to usher in the New Year just as aridly. Aided at sea by gales which have dashed several rum craft on the rocks, dry agents ashore are obtaining scores of injunctions destined to close various cabarets as public nuisances.

AIRMEN ALMOST HAD TO WALK BACK TO SCOTT FIELD

Airship Sent Out to Find Balloonists Loses the Trail.

Following a free balloon with an airship to take the balloonists home after they land is one thing, and finding the balloon when it lands is another. So airmen from Scott Field learned Thursday, while farmers of Southern Illinois and Southeastern Missouri watched their big Mullion airship flying back and forth.

The free balloon took off from the field at 9:30 a. m., carrying Majors Rush B. Lincoln and John D. Reardon and Lieut. Frank M. McKee on a training flight. They expected to land about 1 p. m. near Carbondale, Ill. The best-laid plans of birds and airmen go oft astray; in this instance the balloonists soon encountered a strong cross-wind which swept them across the Mississippi River. They landed at 1:30 p. m. at Glenallen, Mo., 30 miles west of Cape Girardeau, having traversed 120 miles.

The speedy Mullion, with a Colonel as passenger and two Lieutenants as pilots, took off at 11:30 a. m. to pick up the balloonists. The balloon was not sighted in the 68 miles to Carbondale, nor found in a circling of the misty atmosphere above the countryside. The airship was landed at Carbondale with the aid of citizens and a telephone call to Scott Field brought word that the balloonists had reported from Glenallen.

The Mullion left Carbondale at 2:30 p. m., reached Glenallen at 3:40, loaded the aerial adventurers and returned to Scott Field in the moonlight at 8 o'clock, having gone 225 miles.

WOMAN MAKES COMPLAINT AGAINST DOG CATCHER

Complaint against methods of a city dog catcher was made to police yesterday by Mrs. Bertha Baum of 8312 Pennsylvania avenue. She said a dog catcher came into her yard about noon, jerked her dog, on which she has paid dog license for 1922, from her arms, rudely pushed her, cursed at her and then took her dog away.

She went to the dog pound with a patrolman, found her dog, but was forced to pay a 75-cents impounding fee before she could take the animal home. She filed a complaint, furnishing the names of three witnesses to the incident and a description of the dog catcher. It is expected the prosecutor's office will take the matter up with the City Marshal, who has supervision over the dog pound.

Accidentally Shot by Brother.

Edgar Klaus, 10 years old, accidentally was shot in the stomach yesterday afternoon with a .22-caliber rifle in the hands of his brother, Charles, 12, while they were playing with the weapon in the kitchen of their home, 1202 Baker street, East St. Louis. The rifle was a Christmas present to Charles. Edgar is in a critical condition.

They began their honeymoon at Angora, where they first met during the height of the Turco-Greek campaign.

M'KOIN EXTRADITION ACTION LIKELY TUESDAY

Former Mer Rouge Mayor Predicts More Bloodshed if He Is Taken Back.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 30.—Special Deputy Sheriff Calhoun of Morehouse Parish, Louisiana, who has with him a requisition on the Governor of this State for the return to Louisiana of Dr. B. M. McKoin, is expected to arrive here tomorrow. Owing to the holiday Monday, it is believed Gov. Ritchie will not act on the case until Tuesday.

Patrolman William O. Burroughs, who was found "unconscious" on the waterfront several days ago, and whose removal to a hospital led to the discovery here of Dr. McKoin, former Mayor of Mer Rouge, La., resigned yesterday. After Burroughs had been revived in a hospital, medical authorities sent a report to police headquarters. The report was signed by Dr. McKoin, and this led to McKoin's arrest.

According to a telegram received here yesterday from Monroe, La., the father of D. McKoin urged the latter not to fight extradition but return to Louisiana. The message stated numerous persons were ready to testify in Dr. McKoin's behalf and that a detailed alibi would be established. It also stated proper precautions for the safeguarding of Dr. McKoin's life, against possible mob violence, would be provided for.

Dr. McKoin declared that "there will be more bloodshed in Louisiana than ever if I put my foot on Mer Rouge soil again."

He stated that he "would rather die 40 times than be taken back," and charged Gov. Parker with being behind the plot to force his extradition.

In an interview wit hnewspaper men at the hospital, Dr. McKoin said: "It is the bloodthirsty crowd that wants me, not the authorities of Louisiana." The presence of troops about the jail at Mer Rouge, he said, would not safeguard his life.

"The sight of me would be the signal for the beginning of the greatest slaughter of human life this country has ever known," he declared. "I wouldn't last long enough to smell the smoke." The doctor declared, however, that the respectable and law abiding element would battle to the last man to save him.

POLICE SEARCH STREET CARS IN PURSUIT OF A ROBBER

Unsuccessful Hunt Extends From Union Boulevard to Twelfth and Olive.

Policemen and detectives stopped six east-bound Delmar-Olive street cars shortly afternoon today during a chase which extended from Union boulevard to Twelfth boulevard and Olive street in an effort to apprehend a robber who had held up a truck driver near the Gatesworth Hotel, 245 Union boulevard, and obtained $150.

The policemen boarded each street car as they overtook it in automobiles and searched it for the robber, while scores of startled passengers looked on. They did not find the man.

The holdup occurred at noon as Joseph Cather, 30, of 3731 North Twenty-first street, a driver for Morris & Co., meat packers, was preparing to take his truck into an alley near the hotel. The robber jumped on the truck, pushed a revolver against Cather's body and took a bag containing the money from his pocket. The robber ran north on Union boulevard to Delmar boulevard, with Cather and hastily summoned policemen in pursuit. Bystanders told the officers they had seen a man board an east-bound Delmar car. An automobile was pressed into service and the chase began.

JAPANESE CABINET CENSURED

Privy Council's Action Not Expected to Bring Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 30.—The impression here today is that the Privy Council's resolution of yesterday, communicating to the Prince Regent a sharp criticism of the Chinese policy of the Kato ministry, will not cause a Cabinet crisis. Critics point out that while the Privy Council condemned the Government's Chinese policy, it confirmed the Chinese postal agreement.

The Cabinet, although censured, got what it wanted. The resolution is interpreted to have been, in effect, a warning for the Cabinet not to sign agreements before procuring the Privy Council's assent.

MISSING MURDER TRIAL WITNESS ARRESTED

Woman Says She Was Offered $100 and Told She Was Not Wanted to Testify.

Mrs. Teresa Ganninger, 23 years old, of 4039 Olive street, missing State's witness in the case of Paul Palermo, charged with murder in connection with the shooting of Forrest Rainey and Emory Gray, Oct. 21, 1921, was arrested last night in a restaurant at 2324 Franklin avenue.

Later Joseph Palermo, 26, of 2717 Stoddard street, a brother of Paul Palermo, was arrested, following a statement by Mrs. Ganninger that he had offered her $100 and told her that she was not wanted as witness at the murder trial.

The killing of Rainey and Gray occurred in a saloon at 2852 Easton avenue, conducted at the time by Palermo, and resulted from a quarrel over the payment for drinks. Mrs. Ganninger was in a back room of the saloon at the time and heard the argument which preceded the shooting. She testified at the Coroner's inquest and before the grand jury, but when the case was called for trial in the June term she failed to appear as a witness.

Joseph Palermo denied having offered Mrs. Ganninger any money, and said he did not tell her to remain away from the trial. He was released on a $1000 bond. Mrs. Ganninger furnished an $800 bond pending outcome of Paul Palermo's trial, which had been continued several times on account of her absence. Paul Palermo claims he shot Rainey and Gray in self-defense.

TWO AUTOMOBILE DRIVERS HIT MEN AND RUN AWAY

James Dobson, 60, Suffers Fractured Skull and James Cody a Fractuerd Nose.

Police are searching for two automobile drivers who injured pedestrians yesterday and feloniously fled.

James Dobson, 60 years old, address unknown, is at the city hospital suffering from a fractured skull as the result of being struck by an automobile at Twelfth boulevard and Market street at 9:40 p. m. The machine continued south in Twelfth and disappeared.

An automobile struck James Cody, 30 years old, 2607 Gravois avenue, when he was fixing a tire of his own machine on King's highway, near Gibson street, at 2 p. m. After knocking Cody about 30 feet the driver put on speed and drove south along King's highway. Cody suffered a fractured nose and brain concussion.

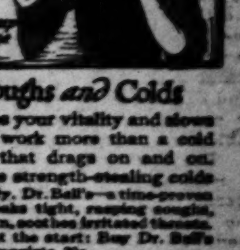

Miss Laura Bowman, 27, of 443 McPherson avenue, cashier at Hotel Statler, was injured at 7:15 p. m., when a coupe in which she was riding with Alonzo Alexander, 28, of 1212 Halimton avenue, was struck by an eastbound Olive-Delmar street car in front of 4014 Olive street. Miss Bowman suffered internal injuries.

Auto Strikes Newsboy.

Horace Dahmar, 20, of 5093 Ridge avenue, a newsboy, suffered bruises when struck by an automobile on Union boulevard near Easton avenue at 6 p. m. The driver of the machine was Fred W. Heath of Webster Groves.

William Koening, 36, of 5436 Blow street, drove his automobile into a machine owned by Dr James W Pruett, 459 Dover place, which was parked before 3902 Bates avenue at 6 p. m. He suffered severe lacerations.

When Edward Weeks, of 315 Buchanan avenue, drove his automobile into a coupe at Washington boulevard and Vandeventer avenue at 3 p. m., a boy jumped out of the coupe and ran. The coupe had been stolen from Eben Rodgers of Alton, Ill., at Vandeventer and Olive street earlier in the afternoon.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Give St. Louis a Ball Park.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ST. LOUISANS will decide at the bond election, Feb. 9, whether certain public improvements shall be made, but there is one sorely needed improvement in a quasi-public institution or enterprise, upon which the public apparently is to have no vote. I refer to St. Louis' alleged major league baseball park. Because Phil Ball won't improve unless the Cardinals share in the expense by paying more rent, and because Sam Breadon won't contract for the payment of more rent in view of the uncertain prospects of the Cardinals for next year, 1923 again will see the city without a park suitable for a world series.

In 1922 it was all one's life was worth to try to get into the park when the Yankees and Giants were here on Saturdays or Sundays. The Yankee series in September showed the park was inadequate. But we smiled at discomfort in pleasure at having a near-winner. But Ball and Breadon have had time to make the park adequate, and not a lick of work has been done. According to press accounts of the situation there are good arguments on both sides from the point of view of fairness. But the public doesn't care about that. What it does care about is a bigger park. Let somebody organize a board of arbitration, get Ball and Breadon together and keep them there until a larger park is secured. There must be a fair way out. If the Cardinals fear a poor season let an increased rental be made conditional on the club's success. If Ball and Breadon are as fair as the boys who stuff their cash boxes, they'll see some way of giving a major league city a major league park. To conduct a world's series at the present park would be like holding the Dempsey-Wills fight at the South Side Y. M. C. A.

BASEBALL FAN.

A Successful Tag Day.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT affords me pleasure to notify you that the Executive Board of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association, at its meeting today, tendered you a vote of thanks for your generous co-operation, in the news and editorial columns, in the thirtieth annual collection campaign.

We feel that by so assisting and by your subscription to the fund you have doubly contributed to the success of the 1922 collection, which totals almost $60,000 and which is one of the largest in the history of the association.

A. L. SHAPLEIGH,
President.

Is This a Good Reason?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THERE are 1200 active licensed engineers and 2000 firemen who, with the exception of the "payroll patriots," will oppose and vote against the administration's bond issue for the following reason: The Director of Public Safety was responsible for the passage of an ordinance imposing an annual tax of $3 on all licensed engineers, and for this $3 we receive absolutely nothing.

The Joint Board of Engineers' Associations recently adopted resolutions requesting the Director of Public Safety and the Mayor to enforce the license law against unlicensed engineers and operators. A committee of 125 called upon Mr. McKelvey with a copy of the resolutions. He heard the committee coming and he made his get-away. Likewise the Mayor later when called up and asked what he was going to do about it. Mr. McKelvey said nothing. Now the Mayor is trying to answer the Safety Council by stating that they should have come to him first.

The engineers tried to lay their grievance before the Mayor, with no better results than the Safety Council has, and they did not call upon him. We had nothing to say about imposing this tax upon us. But if ever we vote in favor of a bond issue we are going to be assured that the money will not be spent for nonunion "payroll patriots" in McKelvey's office. We would also like to ask Kiel if Mr. McKelvey is deputy Mayor? Give us what we pay for or no bonds.

Broadway Car Service.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHY the United Railways should be permitted to run only one Broadway car through out of every three cars southbound, turning in two of these cars at the Osage street car barns, is a problem many of us who ride this line to points beyond Osage street have been trying to solve. The through Broadway cars are packed to full capacity, and it is impossible to board them at points south of Market street between 5 and 5:30 o'clock in the evening, but the cars to "Osage only" travel almost empty. This would be proper in the middle of the day, when traffic is light, but between 5 and 6 o'clock in the evening there is no excuse for this in a city of this size, which has to depend entirely on its surface lines to take care of all its traffic.

The service at California avenue and Chippewa street for passengers from Lee cars to Bellefontaine cars is very poor. At 5:30 in the evening there are from 50 to 100 people always waiting at this intersection, who wait from five to 15 minutes for Bellefontaine cars southbound. Complaint should be made to the Missouri Public Service Commission.

ART MUSEUM CONTROL.

The present members of the Board of Control of the Art Museum are men of unquestioned integrity and capacity. Some of them are recognized connoisseurs of art, devoted to its service. There is no reason to change now in order to assure honesty and capacity in the management of the museum and the expenditure of the funds which it draws from public revenues.

The constitution of the board, however, is an anomaly in public institutions. The museum is a municipal institution supported by revenue accruing from a special tax levied on the taxpayers of St. Louis; but it is not responsible to either the people who supply its revenue or to the representatives of the people in the city government for either the management of the museum or the expenditure of the public funds devoted to it. The board is self-perpetuating, the vacancies being filled by the board, the appointments of its officials being made and the money from the public fund being expended without reference to any authority representing the people or the municipal government.

In principle the self-perpetuating board is wholly indefensible and there is no assurance that it may not in time become bad in practice. It may greatly deteriorate in the course of time and work directly against the high purpose for which it was established. Its irresponsible power may be abused to the detriment of the museum and of the art interests of the city. Unfortunately, this has been the history of the exercise of irresponsible power.

On the other hand, the movement to reorganize the board by abolishing the self-perpetuating board and placing the control in the hands of the municipal authorities, while the principle is sound, may be even worse in practice. If politics is to control and the Art Museum be placed in the hands of political officials or appointees, wholly unfit by education and experience to direct a museum or to select its art treasures, the fate of the museum will be the worst possible.

We cannot see the museum controlled as suggested by the Mayor, Comptroller, President of the Board of Aldermen and other political officials elected for purposes far at variance with the duties of directing and promoting the value of an art museum and the interests of art in the museum and the city. Already there is a threat of non-co-operation on the part of those who are contributing to the museum and cherish its highest standards of usefulness.

If a change is to be made, and the principle of public control of public funds probably makes it inevitable in time, the interests and purposes of the Art Museum and the objects for which the funds were voted should be carefully guarded. If a public control board is to be instituted in place of the present board, or the city is to be represented on the board, vacancies should be filled by appointments solely on the basis of fitness.

The problem is one that calls for the judgment of the best minds in the city and for co-operation between the municipal authorities and the art interests to find a solution which will satisfy the public and conserve the art interests and public purpose of the Art Museum. It would be unfortunate and destructive to the museum and all the objects of the people who voted to establish it if the question of control fell into a fight between the political and art forces of the city. The solution calls for reason, judgment and helpful co-operation.

The police are trying to discover where a small roadster dragged a Texas calf that the driver found on the streets. They might be more successful if they tried to find out where the calf dragged the roadster.

THE ALIEN PROPERTY SCANDAL.

Federal indictments have been brought against Joseph Guffey, former "dollar-a-year man," and Martin E. Kern, for transactions originating in the office of the Alien Property Custodian. It is charged that the Bosch Magneto Co., a German-owned corporation, was sold for less than half its value to Martin E. Kern, himself an alien and an ex-convict, and that Mr. Guffey has embezzled over $400,000. Whether Attorney-General Daugherty has at last decided to proceed with earnestness and vigor in war-time cases may be partly determined from the energy with which the Department of Justice carries forward this prosecution.

Numerous scandalous charges have been made concerning the administration of the Alien Property Custodian's office under Francis P. Garvan, but no comprehensive investigation has been made of these accusations. Attorney-General Daugherty has shown only the mildest disposition to investigate. It may be possible that the Keller and Untermyer charges have aroused him to the necessity of action. We hope so. In the integrity with which its officers conserved and disposed of enemy property, the honor of the nation is at stake.

"AN ISOLATION."

Richard Washburn Child, our Ambassador to Italy, at present acting as American observer at the Lausanne conference, made an excellent speech the other day in seconding the demand of the allied delegates that Turkey provide a juridical system to protect the rights of foreigners. In the course of his speech he gave this rather striking definition of sovereignty:

> In the modern world a sovereignty which has its eyes only on its sanctity is as a sovereignty an isolation. It is the belief that only those sovereignties are progressive which are confident and ready to arbitrate, co-operate and contribute to practical ends.

Our observer further remarked that sovereignty is "often expressed in terms of co-operation with the outside world," and he also spoke of "that intercourse upon which the prosperity of nations is founded." The speech, though couched in the courteous language of diplomacy, was, nevertheless, a severe arraignment of the Turk's nonprogressiveness and obstinate determination to play a lone hand. Yet with scarcely a change in the text the arraignment could as appropriately and competently be delivered against the Harding administration. Have we not boastfully proclaimed our own sanctity or safety as our sole concern and have we not steadfastly refused to co-operate with other nations or contribute, in any way, to practical ends? If such a policy makes Turkey "an isolation," what does it make of the United States, which, along those lines, has out-Turked the Turk?

Mr. Harding thought the Borah resolution equivalent to saying that the executive branch of the Government "is not fully alive" to the world situation. The impression pretty generally prevails that the executive branch of the Government is not more than one-half of one per cent alive to the world situation.

OUR ORIGINAL SENATOR.

When the Missouri electorate retires Selden P. Spencer at the next election, it will rob the United States Senate of its most original jester. Recently the Senator startled a good many people by casually tendering Attorney-General Daugherty's job to Jesse Barrett. Nobody was more surprised than Daugherty himself, unless it was President Harding, who, although he would have made the appointment, had no knowledge that a change was contemplated. Now Spencer repeats by offering the State Prohibition Director's office to a friend of his. In one sense it is too bad that Spencer will leave the Senate. Given another term he might entirely reconstitute the United States Supreme Court and the diplomatic corps—at least, on paper.

That blanket warrant is a shroud.

WHERE IS THE RULE OF FAIR PLAY?

A St. Louis girl was awarded $65,000 from a railroad in a local Circuit Court for the loss of one arm and one leg and the mangling of her remaining foot in a grade-crossing accident. This award, which we assume to be not excessive, offers an interesting comparison. When the case of Joseph Sommer, the laborer and head of a family including three children, who was blinded and half deafened in an industrial accident, came to the Supreme Court of Missouri after six years of legal dallying, that court not only reversed the case on a narrow technicality, but also ruled that the award was excessive!

Is there a rule in our courts for workingmen supporting families and another for persons injured in nonindustrial accidents? Is the loss of limbs more incapacitating than loss of eyes and partial loss of hearing? Or is there a fear in our courts of setting a precedent in industrial awards which will create panic in the ranks of negligent employers?

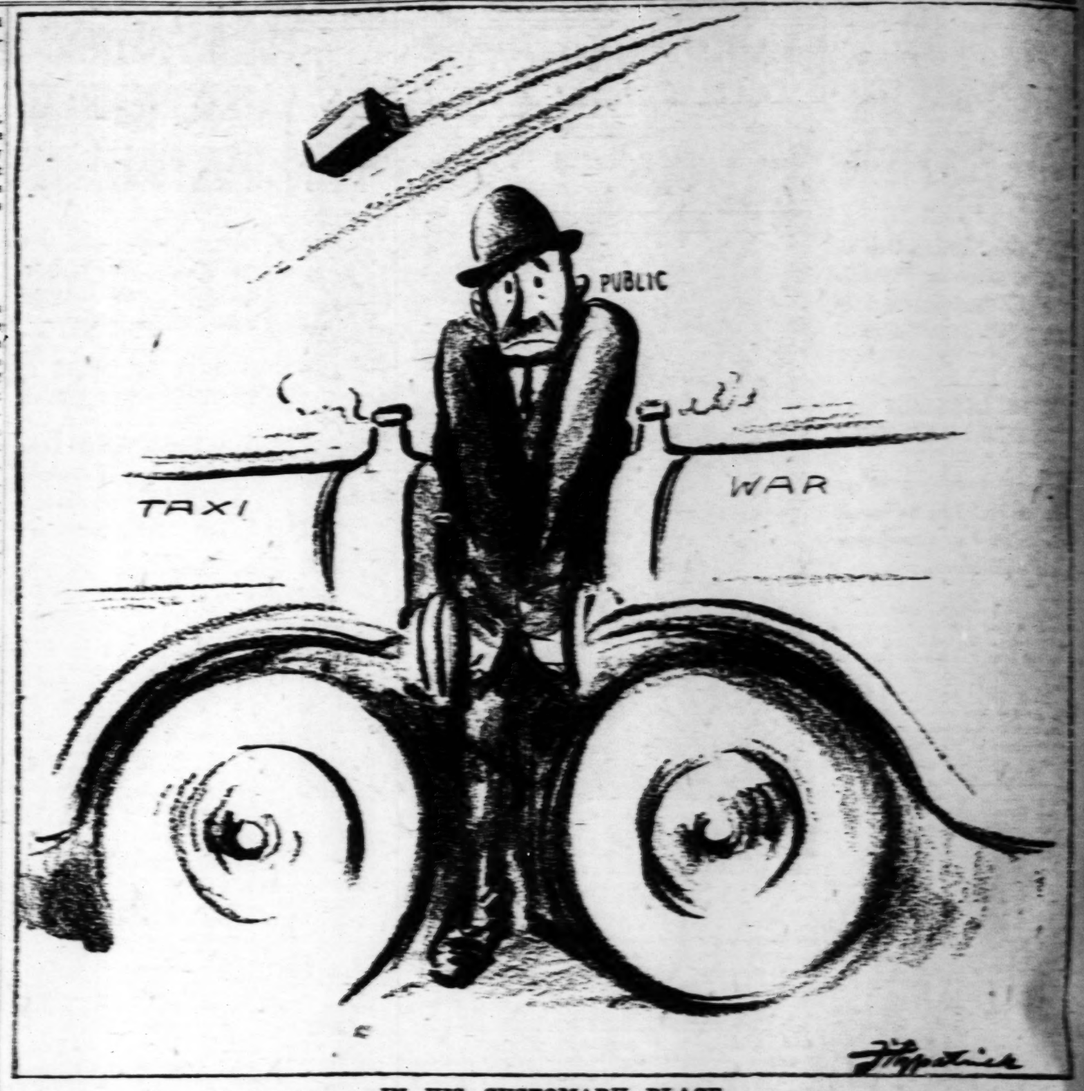

THAT SUCKER LIST—"HOW COME?"

The names of approximately 6,000 St. Louisans were found on the "sucker list" of a blind pool promoter whose local plans have been interrupted by police interference. The victims of this kind of swindle, it is said, are for the most part people with small savings. If that is true an effort to ascertain how this particular promoter procured those names might yield important information. Certainly thrifty, hard-working people should be protected against blue-sky sharpers as fully as the law and business vigilance can protect them.

The Turk is learning. Already he loves oil as passionately as a British Marquis or an American Secretary of State.

PANETELA.

YES, Luella,
Panetelas
Entertain
A lot of folks:
Just as recently
At Christmas
Someone sent
A box of smokes.
Reading something
Long and slender
In the humor
Of his thought,
Lo, he pulled
His bulging wallet
And anonymously Bought!

These as well
Were panetelas,
Even fifty
In a box,
Coming with
The season's greetings
And the customary Knocks.
In their tall
And fragile beauty,
Each encompassed
By a band,
Came they
With a cheering Message
From the donor's
Open hand.

So it is,
My sweet Luella:
While the poets
Cry for bread,
Here is something
Puts the zinger
Fifty puthroos
Ahead.
Chaste, attenuate
And fragrant,
Fit to melt
The smoker's heart,
Here we have Applause and relish
Of attenuated
Art.

Thoughts at best
Are very slender,
Seldom fit
To fill a line;
Wit is like
A very arrow,
Like the needle
Of the pine.
Satire fashioned
As a bludgeon
Falls defeated
With a thud,
And the meters
Of convention
Leave the poet's
Name but Mud.

Thus in tomes
Of musty tonnage,
All unheeded
By the throng,
God knows what Aspiring poet Lifts his Unintended song.
Whereas
Hearing to its business
Working neither
Lo, we find
The panetela
Giving infinite Delight.

In Hartford, Conn., I was on my way to a theatrical performance. It was very shortly after the electric street car service had been put into operation. Motormen were still a bit green as to the right speed at which to negotiate corners, such as the one here at Taylor and Olive on the Delmar cars.

I was standing at the front end of the car, which had two sliding doors, which opened into the vestibule; had my hands very lightly on the brass handles so that I could grab them quickly for support. The car went round a corner with a whiz. My hands failed to grab the handles quickly enough. I sat down in a lady's lap. I tried to rise, but the swing of the car rendered me powerless to do so. I turned to the lady, raising my hat, and said: "Madame, excuse me, but I am afraid I must sit here a little longer." Her answer was the sweetest of smiles.

Now that Maine has outlawed ice water because people take the ice out of it and make alcoholic drinks, perhaps Kansas will carry on the good work and outlaw lemons. Then we can in time get to bottles and hip pockets. A good many people think prohibition will become effective with the next generation, but Maine hasn't given up this generation. Not yet.

We are told that prohibition has been a great boon to the Italians. Well, an Italian discovered America, and so far as we know this is the first time his countrymen ever got anything out of it.

THE STRAITS QUESTION.

From the Nation.

IT really looks as if the welter of conflicting grands and ambitions at Lausanne were about to produce a more satisfactory solution of the straits question than has seemed possible since the breakdown of allied common sense at Versailles. The Turks are to have the city of Constantinople, which, with all its drawbacks, is well, for to grant any other Power possession would require the maintenance there of a perpetual standing army and leave a festering wound in Islam. An international commission like the Danube River Commission is to control traffic through the straits, which are to be demilitarized. Ships of commerce are to have free passage at all times, which is as it should be. Ships of war are to have more freedom of passage than we might wish. * * * If the Black Sea could be disarmed that would be another great [illegible] on the path to peace, and for never Russia [illegible] to advocate it marked the end of a chapter of history. Russia's ambition to open the straits to her warships having been one of the great sources of international friction before the war.

MEN FOR HOUSEWORK.

From the Los Angeles Times.

DR. SLOAN CHESSER of London steps into the limelight with a highly delectable scheme for rearranging the duties of the sexes. Women having toiled through the centuries as the cooks and scullery maids of the family, the doctor is all for turning the tables and giving the men an opportunity to exercise their native talents at peeling the kitchen stove and giving the nursery its bath. The ladies, avers the doctor, should fill the pulpits as preachers and follow the professions of medicine and nursing, while the men should train their scintillating intellects on the thrilling chores of cleaning house and concocting the evening meal. Although the doctor is a lady, this novel idea is no deep-seated scheme of revenge. She gives as her reason that men are more adept for these uplifting tasks, by virtue of their greater strength and because they are as much as competent. We strongly suspect that the doctor is married and that she has kissed the Blarney stone. She probably has a husband whom she jollies in this fashion into doing all the housework and, it having worked so well in her case, she is willing to let the suffering sisterhood in on the secret. At that, it is an engaging plan, and an obliging Government having [illegible] the present crop of eligible young men to [illegible] peel potatoes and mend their clothes preparatory through the medium of army training, there is no reason why the present-day bride should be [illegible] dowed with repellent tasks if she follows the doctor's prescription and feeds the brute a few [illegible] some compliments.

AMERICAN NOVELS.

From the Indianapolis News.

IF an American novelist writes something which strikes the public fancy, he yields to the temptation to exploit the money value of his success and pours out an incredible amount of [illegible] writing at so much a word. While it is possible that want of power has more to do than [illegible] else with the failure of American [illegible] to turn out more books of lasting worth, there is something in the overexploitation theory. At the back of it all is the habit of superficial [illegible]. Most of the ephemeral books turned out [illegible] product of credulous writers completely [illegible] by the glamour of American prosperity. They write about sleek people and shining cities, [illegible] the ornaments of America, rather than about [illegible] body and soul. And their novels are read because they sell, which brings the problem back to the market, and reflects no credit on [illegible] taste of the country.

The Conning Tower

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The Diary of Our Own Samuel Pepys.

Saturday, Dec. 23.

Up and by omnibuss to M. Connally's, and with him to call upon Rob Benchley, and made as tho we were jingled, saying we had had not been to bed at all, albeit we had nought to drink soever. But Rob worried over us. So to H. Ross's, where was a tree groaning with gifts, and they had a fine copy of St. Nicholas for the year 1891 for me, meant as a joke, but it was a fine book, with some verses by O. Herford and some fine enigmas and charades in it, and I gave each one a fine fountain pen, forasmuch as after the games they have been wont to borrow mine to write cheoques with, which is bad for the pen and delays me near an hour a week. Thence to C. Gaige's for dinner, and so with Ethel to see "Why Not?" which concerns itself with the absurdity of the divorce laws, which meseems, is so patent as to make the play needless, and too, it was played for the most as farce.

So back to H. Ross's, and found nine at cards, and I played too, with great good luck to myself, and so home, at near five in the morning, and found on my bed a fine Christmas gift from my wife, three nightgowndes of linen with my initials worked on them, which I shall try to remember to tell her is a great convenience, sithen when there are dozens of us in a bed, it will be easy to distinguish me by the embroidered initials. Yet I hope I forget to tell her, forasmuch as the initials are very featly made, and doubtless she was at great pains to make them.

Sunday, Dec. 24.

Lay long in bed, and so up and with my wife to see "The Clinging Vine," the best musickall play I have seen this year, and Peggy Wood sang and acted excellently well, and Miss Sears' lyricks well made and simple, albeit sometimes the musick too fox-trotty for the words. Thence we to E. Ferber's for dinner, a great feast, and so to the Garrick, to see "The Tidings Brought to Mary," with an occasional fine appeal to the eye, but little to the ear; at any rate, to mine. I had liefer see a good play by a foreign playwright than a poor one by an American author, but Lord! this play of P. Claudel's I doubt is half as good as many an American play the theater guild has had a chance to produce.

Monday, Dec. 25.

(Christmas day.)

To my office and there all day in great content, nobody coming to call upon me, and so home and with my wife to Jane Grant's for dinner, and thence to see "Rose Briar," a play with a profound theme, which is that of a sympathy collector, of a person who can always put an innocent person in wrong, one who cheats for the purpose of gaining things to minister to her vanity. But methought Mr. Tarkington did not more than touch on this, and after the first act it grew less interesting. But Mistress Julia Hoyt and Mr. F. Conroy acted with great skill and truth, methought. So with my wife and Edevol back to Jane's, and a great party there, and I talked with Kate Sproehnle and Luth Gillmore and D. Taylor, and so home and read till near 3 in "Command."

Tuesday, Dec. 26.

Up betimes and to my office, and there all day, without writing anything of any moment, or for that matter thinking aught momentous neither. Each night I pray, "O Lord, make me a profound thinker," and have so done for many years, but the thoughts grow no deeper than ever they were, and I am beginning to have misgivings about the efficacy of prayer.

So home for dinner and thence to see J. Wise's children, and they tell me their father is traveling through Europe and they are having a merrytime in his absence, as in truth I always had when my parents were away after I was 12, but before that I was desolate when they would go out of an evening. Thence to C. Morley's for a bit, he living but a block away from me, and I tried to teach him to blow smoke rings, but he made scant progress. So home and to bed.

Wednesday, Dec. 27.

To the office, and there all day fashioning some verses, a vast amount of time, yet when I think of Housman with 100 poems in 30 years, I am somewhat ashamed. Yet, after all there is no comparing to be done, for I have not in all my versifying wrote a single real poem yet, nor ever could do one as good as his poorest. Last night C. Morley told me of how Pearsall Smith works, rewriting his Trivia, which makes me think of Housman's "Last Poems" as a potboiler.

So home, and found there Mildred Creen and Tubby, and Lucie Taussig for dinner, of roast lamb, and thence with my wife to see "Romeo and Juliet," and save the Mercutio of B. Sydney I liked it not at all. I sat next G. Buck and he told me a tale of a play actor who was found dead, and his friends took him to an undertaker, but the undertaker said, "Nay, I cannot bury him. Why not? asked they. He is not the type, quoth the undertaker.

Thursday, Dec. 28.

A dreadful wet day, but met Peggy Leech and rode downtown with her, and she tells me she is going to Italy next month. So I told her to read "The Enchanted April" which is full of merriment, with enough acidity to make it bearable. To the office and there till late, and thence to Mistress Edna Kellogg's and near fell down what with being unable to keep my feet against the wind and sleet. There to dinner, and played some Cassino, then after with my wife as partner, and we did well enough, and so home, but the wind blew me along the ice and my wife laughed at me and said I should be able to balance myself better, but the wind was too strong for me, which is the truth as the blue vault of heaven is my witness.

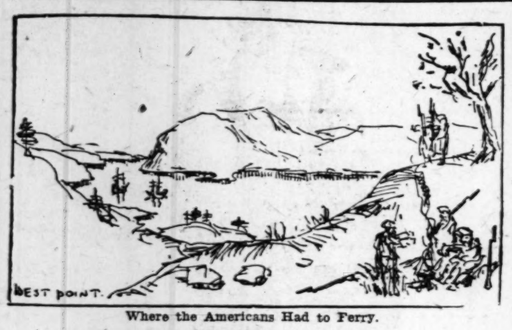

Friday, Dec. 29.

To the office, and in a high good humor, this day being my last day of work for this year and this year being the best ever I had, in health, in happiness, and in my adventures with money; which being so I do not fret over my work at all, sithen it is the best I can do, and though the work of others is better, that depresses me no more than that the work of others is worse inspirits me. For which I thank heaven it is so.

AMERICAN HISTORY FOR AMERICAN CHILDREN

After the First Year of the French Alliance the Stage Was Set for the Final Effort.

Where the Americans Had to Ferry.

By HENDRIK VAN LOON,
Author of "The Story of Mankind."

(Copyright, 1922)

THE long-expected French fleet arrived at Philadelphia just nine days after the British had left. Washington was anxious to have them go up at once and attack New York, but the French Admiral feared that the larger ships drew too much water to cross the bar. As the next best plan he took his ships to Newport, which was strongly held by the British. The Comte d'Estaing, the French commander, had about 4000 French soldiers on board, and he stopped at Providence, Rhode Island, and picked up 9000 more Americans. This combined force greatly outnumbered the English and the allies contemplated an easy victory.

But shortly after they had landed and begun to lay siege to the town of Newport, the British fleet sailed out to meet it. Suddenly a heavy storm broke and both fleets were forced to sail away and make for the open sea to keep from being wrecked upon the coast. D'Estaing went up to Boston, and Gen. Sullivan, the American commander, fearing that the British would come back, gave up the attempt to take Newport and withdrew from Rhode Island. In November the French fleet went to the West Indies. Although it accomplished little there, part of the British fleet was obliged to leave New York to watch the French. This weakened the British forces around New York, so that the Americans were left in comparative peace for quite a long time.

There was not much that Clinton could do at that moment. He sent a few ships down South, which destroyed the cities of Norfolk and Portsmouth, in Virginia, and brought back a lot of tobacco. On land, a raiding party went through Connecticut, paying visits to New Haven and Norwalk, and leaving a trail of smoking ruins behind it. A few ships also went up the Hudson to Stony Point, a short distance above Nyack, and captured it. There was a ferry there which the American troops were in the habit of using, and Gen. Clinton thought it would be rather a blow to them if he should get hold of it. As there were only 20 men guarding Stony Point, its capture was no great feat. Then Gen. Clinton set to work and made the place into a regular fortress, and detailed 700 men to hold it. The Americans now had to do all their ferrying at West Point, which was a great inconvenience, yet they could not spare the men to make a regular attack upon Stony Point.

But Gen. Anthony Wayne of the American army, nicknamed "Mad Anthony" by his men, with a small body of troops, stormed and retook Stony Point in a night attack. It was a very clever bit of work, very cleverly pulled off, and added greatly to Mad Anthony's reputation. But the Americans were not able to hold on to the fort once they had taken it. Shortly afterwards it was reduced to ruins.

And in this way the first year of the French alliance went by and nothing of importance was accomplished. The time had come to set the stage for the final effort. Both the Americans and the English felt that the hour had come to settle the issue definitely and for all time. But in England many people began to feel that this war was an unprofitable venture, and voices were heard which suggested that it might be better to make an end to this "civil warfare" and concentrate all the strength of the empire upon the war against the archenemy, France.

BRAHMS SYMPHONY AND THIBAUD WIN OVATION

French Violinist's Fastidious Art Revealed in Mozart Concerto and Other Numbers.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

IMAGINE a popular ovation befalling the scholastic Johannes Brahms, Doctor of Philosophy! That is what occurred yesterday afternoon at the Odeon—thanks to the composer's rich and melodious tone-painting in his Second Symphony (the "Pastoral," in D Major, Op. 73); and thanks also to the unhackneyed and able performance given to the work by the orchestra, under the vivacious baton of Mr. Ganz. The director held the masterpiece confidently in his grasp, so much so that most of the time he was under little necessity of watching the score. The audience recalled him several times at the conclusion.

After the intermission Jacques Thibaut, most distinguished of French violinists and a Mozart specialist, presented Mozart's Sixth Concerto, in E-flat Major—Mozart's, that is, unless, as is gravely suspected, the orchestration of the second and third movements and of most of the first movement was written by the master's favorite pupil, Franz Suesemayr.

Upon modern ears, kindled to emotional appeal, this serene and Hellenic music, aiming at unclouded perfection of design and pure beauty of pattern, at radiance rather than ardor, is likely to fall with an alien accent. But the Greek spirit emerged triumphant in M. Thibaud's refined and exquisite art, and Mozart won quite as much applause as Brahms.

The soloist's second number was to have been the Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso of Saint-Saens; he brought instead the orchestral parts for the same composer's "Havanaise," the languorous rhythms of which presented the violinist in a new mood, that of a voluptuous delicacy. Then, for good measure, he gave the Introduction and Rondo, with Mrs. David Kriegshaber at the piano.

Two Novelties by Delius.

The usual novelty for the orchestra consisted of two pieces by Frederick Delius, "On Hearing the First Cuckoo of Spring" and "Summer Night on the River." These proved water colors of dainty poesy, delicately colored, instinct with pictorial mood and love of nature. They were handsomely received. The program closed with a fiery performance of the "Finlandia" of Sibelius.

The concert will be repeated tonight, after which Mr. Ganz leaves for New York, where he will appear twice next Wednesday as soloist of the City Symphony Orchestra, directed by Dick Foch. He will play Tschaikowsky's pianoforte concerto.

A. H. Woods Buys Chicago Theater.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.—A. H. Woods, New York theatrical manager, has announced that he has bought the Planters Hotel and the Columbia Theater property. The theater is a burlesque house and it is said its owners immediately will begin the building of a new theater.

BERNHARDT SAYS SHE WILL ACT WEDNESDAY

Famous Star, Recuperating, Declares "Indisposition" Cannot Stop Her Appearance.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 30.—"Tell the American people that I shall return to the stage next Wednesday night," said Sarah Bernhardt to the Associated Press last evening in the course of the first interview she has granted since her collapse during the rehearsal of a new play two weeks ago.

The actress showed great improvement yesterday, having been able to have luncheon with members of her household. Her physicians declared they had found no evidence of organic disease or chronic illness, and were of the belief that the collapse of Madame Bernhardt was due only to overexertion and strain.

"Tell my American friends," she added, "that I am far from dead, or far from dying, as some reports would have it, and that this rest, as I choose to call it, probably will give me a new lease on life."

In Good Spirits.

The correspondent was received in a little sitting room next to the star's bedroom. "Divine Sarah" was reclining on a French sofa, dressed in her famous ermine robes, in the same easy attitude she has taken on the stage in recent years. She had just finished a long talk with Sacha Guitry, author of the play, "Un Sujet De Roman," which Madame Bernhardt was rehearsing when illness came upon her. Although very pale, the never-to-be-forgotten sparkle of eye and smile were much in evidence as she waved the correspondent to a seat.

"I'm delighted to have this opportunity of sending out the sincere thanks of my heart to my many American friends who have asked for me during my recent indisposition," said the star, smiling. "You see, I am far from being finished. In fact, I shall resume my role next Wednesday."

At this point several intimate friends who were in the room smiled and one of them said: "Perhaps! Perhaps! Are you quite sure so soon as all that?"

Bernhardt's eyes flashed for a moment and she replied, "But I have given my word to Sacha Guitry and I shall be there. You can bet on it."

Physicians Skeptical.

Although the physicians in attendance and the members of the household are afraid to tell her, it is not improbable that Bernhardt will be forced to rest for a longer period. The doctors are afraid that a resumption of work now would prove fatal to the 79-year-old actress.

"You know I think I shall be able to act for a long time yet," continued Madame Bernhardt, apparently having dismissed the subject of her return to work as a matter already definitely determined.

"Work keeps one young and so long as I can work and please the public I shall be able to act. If I rested too long I wouldn't live."

After assuring the actress that the American people were delighted over her rapid recovery, the correspondent stood up to say good-by.

"Now remember, Sarah Bernhardt is to return to the stage next Wednesday," declared Madame Bernhardt, meanwhile looking defiantly at several members of her household and friends. "Au revoir, and my love to America."

MORE AUTOMOBILES NEEDED

Number Offered Insufficient to Take Wounded Veterans to New Year's Dinner.

The number of automobile owners who have volunteered use of their cars between 1 and 4 p. m. on New Year's day is insufficient to transport 500 disabled veterans of the world war from the United States Public Health Service Hospital to the Chase Hotel for dinner and return them to the hospital.

About 60 machines are needed. Besides the dinner the hotel management will provide a vaudeville and musical entertainment for the veterans. Offers of automobiles should be telephoned to the office of Chase Ulman in the hotel.

Brother-in-Law of Mrs. Wilson Dies.

By the Associated Press.

EMMITSBURG, Md., Dec. 30.—Sterling Galt, 57 years old, son of the late Matthew Galt, of Virginia, and brother-in-law of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the former President, died at his home here Thursday of pneumonia. He is survived by his widow, a son and a daughter. Until several years ago, Galt published the Emmitsburg Chronicle, a weekly paper.

WIDOW OF J. J. BUTLER DIES AT THE AGE OF 59

Had Been Ill for Several Months —Funeral Will Be Tomorrow.

Mrs. Rose Mary Butler, widow of James J. Butler, former Congressman and millionaire theatrical man, died at 6 p. m. yesterday at her residence, 3711 West Pine boulevard.

She had been ill for four or five months, suffering with a complication of diseases. Her condition was critical for the past month and her son, Edward L. Butler, was summoned several weeks ago from the East, where he is in the theatrical business.

The funeral will be at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow at the residence and at 9 a. m. at St. Francis Xavier's Church. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

James J. Butler died May 31, 1917. He was a son of Col. Ed. Butler, for many years in control of the Democratic organization in St. Louis. Following the death of his father in 1912, James J. Butler suffered an affliction which destroyed his sight and hearing. Mrs. Butler, realizing that this condition was coming, had learned and taught her husband a sign language, by means of touching his hands.

Butler was able to direct his theatrical ventures almost up to the time of his death. James J. Butler inherited nearly $1,000,000 from his father and had previously acquired considerable property himself. He left his estate to his widow and son.

Mrs. Butler, who was 59 years old, was a daughter of the late Richard Lancaster. She was married to Butler in 1896 after her divorce from her first husband, De Witt Steigers. Besides the son, Mrs. Butler is survived by two sisters, Mrs. J. M. Whelan and Mrs. A. L. Witzleben and two brothers, Arthur L. and A. Vest Lancaster.

Lists of Contributions to Christmas Festival Fund Should Be Sent In INDIVIDUALS or firms who have not yet sent in their Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival contribution lists are urged to do so as soon as possible in order that the bills may be paid and the books audited. Remittances of donations may be in cash or check payable to the cashier of the Festival Fund, and should be accompanied by the list of donors. All contributions will be acknowledged in the Post-Dispatch as soon as possible after their receipt.

In instances where it is impossible to remit by check or in person the Post-Dispatch will send a messenger with written authority to sign and receipt for the list and money. No regular messenger is employed for this purpose, however, and when the contributions can be mailed or sent, this course is preferable.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Dec. 30.—East will be favored over West in the intersectional football game to be played here today. The University of Pittsburg, coached by Glen Warner, who will come here next year, will represent the East and will be opposed by Stanford University.

Observers are looking for a low score. "Dope" on the season shows that the Pittsburg eleven came strong at the close of the campaign. The same was not true with the Cardinals. For that reason, if for no other, the Panthers have been the favorites in the second sectional contest on the coast this winter.

Pittsburg will have the advantage on the offense, as the Cardinals have no line plunger to match Hewitt, star fullback of the Warner aggregation. The two teams are rated about even on the defense.

There is one individual struggle that will be watched with interest. It is between the rival centers, Bowser of Pittsburg and Capt. de Groot of Stanford. Bowser was placed on Walter Camp's second All-America eleven and picked on the first by many, while De Groot was named on nearly every All-Coast team.

One of the main cogs in the Stanford offense will be out of the game. Art Wilcox is suffering from an injury, which will not permit his playing.

Unsettled weather was predicted for the game.

HORSESHOE PITCHERS START PRACTICE FOR NATIONAL TOURNEY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Dec. 30.—Training camps are being established in the "Sunshine City" by horse-shoe pitchers entered in the annual "barnyard golf" tournament to be held here during the week of Feb. 19, when the national title and $5000 in cash will be hung up for contestants as prizes.

C. C. Davis of Columbus, O., winner of the 1922 tourney, arrived here during the week to get into trim for his effort to regain the laurels he lost to Frank Lundin, the New London, Ia., wizard, in the Des Moines summer event. Davis will make a trip around the Florida horse-shoe pitching camps, returning here early in February.

H. M. Wilks, Michigan State champion; C. M. Mallery, Barberton, O.; Harry J. Borne, New Jersey State champion of Atlantic City; J. F. Francisco, Morenci, Mich.; W. W. Tarry, Lisbon, O., and B. C. Shedaker, Asbury Park, N. J., are also on hand.

At least a dozen women will be entered in the national tourney for women.

BILL TILDEN ENCOURAGED AFTER FIRST WORKOUT

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 30.—William T. Tilden, national lawn tennis champion, was in action on the courts yesterday for the first time since he had a portion of his middle finger removed because of an infection. He took a brief workout at the Second Regiment Armory in preparation for his exhibition matches in Chicago on January 5 and 6.

"I feel greatly encouraged after my practice," said Tilden. "I was surprised that I did as well as I did. Of course, it will take several workouts to determine whether I shall regain my old form, but I am hopeful I may be able to tell after the exhibition matches in Chicago."

FIRPO TO BOX WINNER OF BRENNAN-JOHNSON BOUT

By the Associated Press.

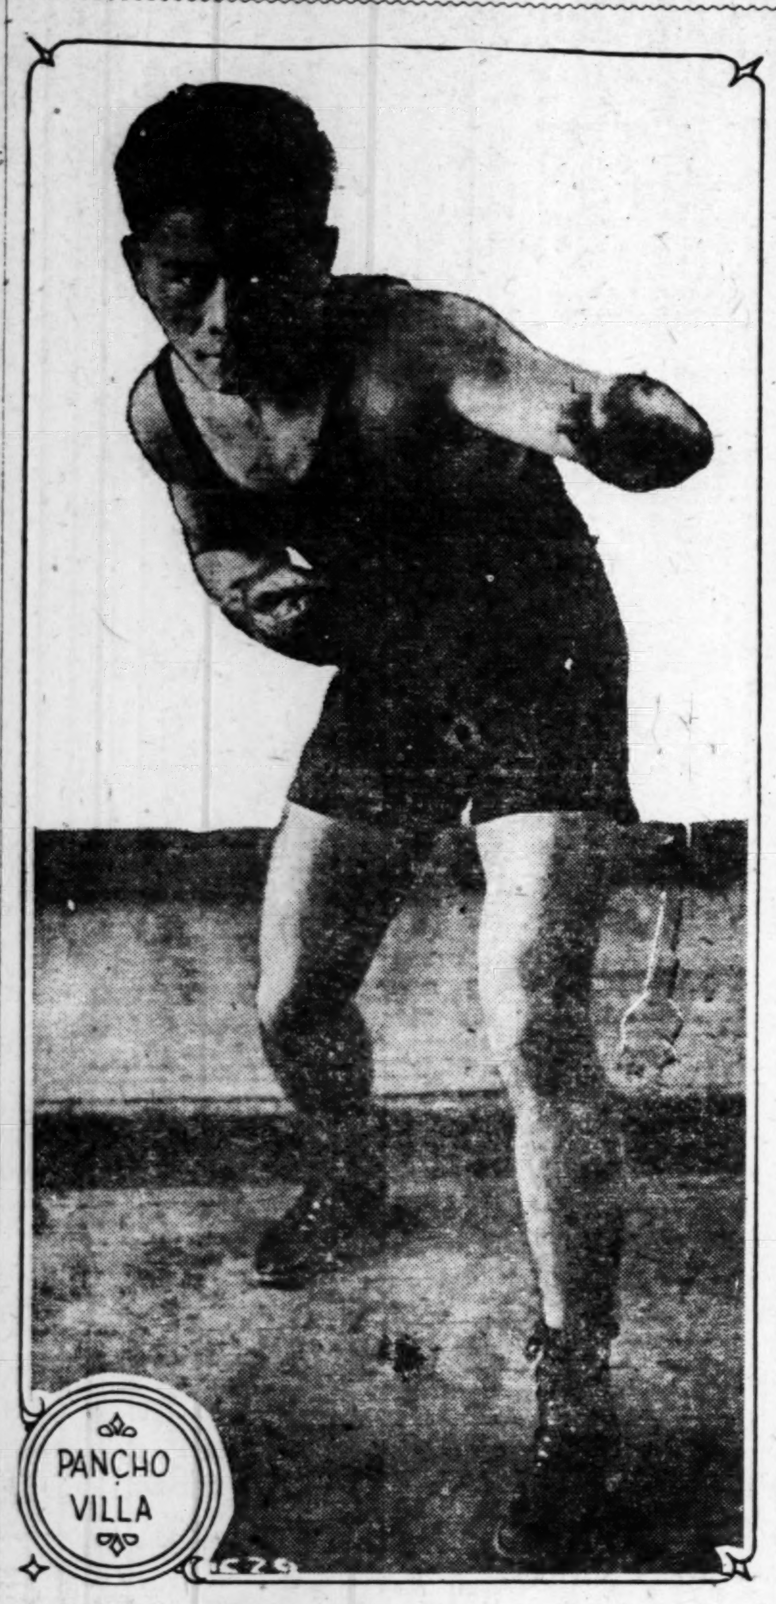

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Tex Rickard announced yesterday he was arranging a bout between Luis Firpo, the South American heavyweight, and the winner of the Bill Brennan-Floyd Johnson match in this city on January 12. The South American has already agreed to return to the United States as soon as the match can be arranged.

Gilbert to Manage Denver.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 30.—William Gilbert, second baseman for the New York Giants, when they won the world's series championship in 1905 and manager last year of the Waterbury team in the Eastern League, has signed to manage the Denver Western League baseball team for 1923, it was announced here yesterday. After leaving the New York team Gilbert played in St. Louis and later managed minor league clubs.

He's Still Winning Bouts

American flyweight champion, who last night gave away four pounds, and was handicapped by a bad ankle, but gained decision over Terry Martin.

West Frankfort to Play Ben Millers

Illinois Eleven Will Provide New Year's Day Attraction for Soccer Followers.

Definite arrangements to bring the West Frankfort (Ill.) soccer eleven here for a New Year's day game were completed last night, by officials of the St. Louis Soccer League. The Illinois team will oppose the Ben Millers, tailenders of the local circuit. The game is scheduled to start at 2:30 o'clock. As a preliminary, the O'Tooles and Heffernans of the St. Teresa League will battle.

This will be the second appearance of the West Frankfort team here this season. Earlier in the campaign, the eleven showed here in a second round cup game against the national champion Scullins. The Scullins won after a hard fight by a score of 4 to 3.

The schedule for tomorrow calls for the Scullins and the Vespers to replay the third round U. S. F. A. cup contest. Two weeks ago the two elevens battled two hours to a scoreless tie.

BOXERS CANNOT TAKE LAYOFFS FROM RING

Boxers cannot take long layoffs from the ring and expect to get right back in form any time they please. Ernie Rice, former British lightweight champion, thought he could do it, but discovered his mistake. Rice came to America for matches and bumped into Richie Mitchell as a starter. He won because Richie broke his arm, but up to that time Mitchell was away ahead. Then Ernie tried New York and fared badly because of a badly cut eye that he did not allow to heal properly. He returned to London, but the big money paid him in the states kind of turned his head and he was idle for a considerable time. When he did break in again he was beaten by Seaman Hall for the title. Another layoff occurred and once more Rice tried to come back against a fellow named Danny Arthurs. Had the latter possessed any class Rice would again have tasted defeat, but he managed to stall off and finally beat his man. Boxers should keep in practice if they expect to follow their calling and be successful.

MISS AMERICA I WINS IN RACES ON COAST

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 30.—Miss America I, piloted by Garfield Wood of Detroit, yesterday won the first heat of a three-day speedboat contest being held off Los Angeles Harbor under the auspices of the California Yacht Club and the Los Angeles Athletic Club Motorboat Racing Association.

Last Night's Fights

New York—Pancho Villa, American flyweight champion, won from Terry Martin, 15 rounds.

Milwaukee—Johnny Dundee easily outboxed Tommy O'Brien of California in 10 rounds.

New Orleans, La.—Johnny Reisler, New York, and Joe Matranga, New Orleans, 15-round draw.

Atchison, Kan.—Jeff Smith Bayonne, N. J. defeated Billy Britton, Kansas Cyclone, 12 rounds.

Birmingham, Ala.—Young Stribling of Macon won from Jack Denham, Atlanta, in sixth round, when Denham's seconds tossed in the sponge.

TWO FOOTBALL STARS DEAD AS RESULT OF AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

By the Associated Press.

WOODBURY, N. J., Dec. 30.—Clarence Alexander Wray, a member of the 1919 University of Pennsylvania football team, and Lewis A. Brunner of Philadelphia, died early today as a result of injuries received when a Pennsylvania train struck their automobile here late last night. Miss Catherine M. Johnston, Philadelphia, and Miss Elizabeth M. Price, Washington, D. C., were injured.

MUNICIPAL BASKETBALL CHAMPIONS WIN CONTEST

The Binghams, last season's Municipal Basketball League champions, opened the campaign with a 38-18 victory over the Paulians on the Battery A court last night. In the other games, the Leacocks won from the Bell Telephones, 29 to 15, while the Mermod-Hills downed East St. Louis Community House, 32—23.

In the girls' league at Mullanphy Gymnasium the games resulted as follows: DeAndreis 14, St. Michaels 12; Girls of the Immaculate Conception School 14, Mullanphy 6; Bob Whites 22, Bailey Girls 7.

Dartmouth Wins Trophy.

By the Associated Press.

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Dec. 30.—Dartmouth won the President Harding trophy for college outdoor sports in competition at the Lake Placid Club yesterday with a total of 20 points. The award represents the second consecutive victory for Dartmouth. McGill was second with 13 points and New Hampshire third with 10. Other scores were: Williams, 8; Yale, 6; Wisconsin, 5.

Millers Sign Two Players.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 30.—Outfielder Glasbrenner, La Crosse, Wis., semipro, and William Klinex, an infielder, who played semiprofessional baseball in Mississippi last season, have been signed by the Minneapolis American Association club for tryouts on the spring training trip, it was announced here yesterday.

Villa, Forced to Favor Bad Ankle, Wins Over Martin

Flyweight Champion Has Better of 15-Round Bout With Bantam Rival.

By Leased Wire From New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. — Pancho Villa, flyweight champion of America, received the decision over Terry Martin at the end of 15 rounds of hard fighting in Madison Square Garden last night.

Villa, sadly handicapped because of his injured right ankle, did not put up his usual amazingly fast fight, but he had enough of the antelope left in him to fairly beat the tireless Martin to the wire. Martin made a gallant effort to get on more than even terms but in the main he was outpunched and outstepped despite Villa's apparent efforts to favor a leg that was hindering his great speed.

To Martin's credit it must be said that he made Villa miss more than Pancho ever has done here before.

Martin has a lazy, loafing style when the other fellow is up and at him, and at times he grinned as the Filipino missed two and three in a row. Villa's bad marksmanship was clearly the result of remaining rooted in one position so as to have as little weight as possible resting on the injured ankle, an injury that came last Tuesday in training.

Many Spectacular Rallies.

Villa, in order to go the route, elected to hit from one position, and Martin was wise enough to draw away when Villa lashed out, making the Filipino miss repeatedly. In spots the bout was spectacular, as the pair mixed with no thought of guarding their jaws. There was action galore every time Villa was pinned on the ropes, for here he was at home, Martin coming into him, to get the best he had.

Villa was always best in the rallies, providing his man stood toe to toe. It was when Terry drove about that Villa was handicapped.

Martin was dropped in the second round with a right to the jaw, but did not accept a count. He got up and went after the champion of our flyweights, but the bell spoiled a thrilling rally. Martin's friends booed the decision, many thinking he had earned a draw.

Babe Herman received a 12-round decision over Hughey Hutchison in the semifinal. "Pickles" Martin earned one over Jimmy Carroll in six rounds and Charley Ryder bested Frankie Florie in four rounds.

Then came the stars, Villa and Martin. The weights were announced: Villa 111; Martin 115½.

HALFBACK PELTRET IS ELECTED CAPTAIN OF 1923 PRINCIPIA ELEVEN

Edward Peltret will captain the 1923 football team of Principia Academy. He was chosen at a meeting of the regular letter men recently. During the past season Peltret played right halfback. He is also a star on the track team.

Fourteen players were awarded letters. The five additional men on the squad were given service letters. Players receiving the regular letters are as follows: Edward Peltret, Karl Peltret and Clifford Fitzgerald, halfbacks; Jefferson Rice, fullback; Bertram Clark quarterback; Marvin Kasmir, Ralph Niemoeller and Mather Garland, ends; James George, center; Vernon Schulz, Preston Mack Dowell and Wilton Conway, tackles; John Everett and Wallace Green, guards.

The players who received service letters are as follows: Warren Freeman, Edmund Ireland, Jason Stone, Donald Taylor and Joe de Camp. In addition to receiving school letters, every man on the squad was presented with a gold footbal by the "Dad's" organization which was recently formed.

The Principia eleven had the best season since 1906. Under the direction of Al Marquard, former Washington University star, the team took part in eight contests, without defeat. Soldan was the only team to hold the academy to a tie. In the eight games, Principia rolled up 246 points against 48 points for the opponents.

Athletics for All Juniors Plan of New Organization

N. A. A. F. to Foster Sports for Those Between Ages of 12 and 21.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Col. Henry Breckinridge, president of the National Amateur Athletic Federation of America, sounded the keynote of this new organization at the meeting here yesterday, saying:

"The great man and woman power of America must be made physically fit. The appalling unfitness of the American youth which the draft tests disclosed must be eradicated."

Thereupon the federation formally adopted the 38,000,000 boys and girls of the country, ranging between the ages of 12 and 21, and will try to teach them to play to make them physically capable of caring for themselves and their country in time of national peril.

The present system of Cook County, Illinois, which includes the city of Chicago, was recommended for imitation by Ellwood S. Brown, the executive secretary. Practically every athletic group in and about Chicago has been drafted into the county body with the exception of the University of Chicago.

The federation has a board of governors for its central working base. Under this group will work the State and regional organizations, such as the Cook County group, the national agencies, such as the National Collegiate Athletic Association, Boy Scouts, the Army and Navy, together with the Executive Committee.

The regional and state units are to be subdivided into local districts. In this way every possible bit of athletic material will be available in the campaign to approach physical perfection for the nation.

List of Events Adopted.

Dr. John H. McCurdy, representing the American Physical Educational Society, submitted a report suggesting standards for the measurement of individual abilities. Considerable opposition was at first voiced against the report, but this was calmed by his acknowledgment of the flaws in the tests and his demand for some immediate working basis.

The events selected—the 100-yard dash running broad jump running high jump and the bar vault were graded to fit the abilities of the junior high school, the high school students, the college undergraduate and the varsity athletes.

A committee was appointed to watch during the coming year the practical application of this standard and to recommend improvements next year.

Dr. John Brown Jr., of the International Y. M. C. A. was unable to read his report on the problems connected with a standardization of rules of the various sports, and Geo. E. Stock substituted for him. The five recommendations which he made to the federation were adopted. They follow:

1. The adoption of national rules already in universal usage, such as the baseball rules of the American and National leagues.

2. Co-operation to secure harmony where similar organizations conflict, such as water polo.

3. The development of the numerous unorganized games.

4. The study of rules of acceptable foreign games.

5. The formation of rules for youthful and possible games.

Two Bodies Still Out.

The federation has not gained as yet the support of two potent athletic organizations, the Amateur Athletic Union and Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletics of America, but Col. Breckinridge hopes to secure their co-operation after a conference between the two executive committees on Jan. 27 in this city.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Honorary president, Warren G. Harding; honorary vice presidents, John W. Weeks, Secretary of War; Edwin Denby, Secretary of the Navy, and Col. Robert M. Thompson, president of the American Olympic Association. President, Col. Henry Breckinridge; vice presidents, Julian S. Myrick, Gen. Palmer E. Pierce and Mrs. Herbert Hoover; treasurer, Herbert C. Pratt; executive officer, Elwood S. Brown. The following members of the executive committee were chosen: Dwight F. Davis, Dr. Geo. J. Fisher, Col. Walt C. Johnson, Capt. C. R. Train, Dr. Dudley B. Reed and Dr. John Brown Jr.

To Hold State Title Event.

A State pocket billiard championship tournament with 10 players entered will be started at the Grand Hall next Wednesday. Among those who will compete are William Rippe, Gus Mueller Fred Rickley, Eddie Shead, Frank Stallhaus, S. Howe and Ivy Sharp. The management also announces that Ralph Greenleaf will play exhibitions here in February.

High School Meet May 5.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Dec. 30.—The University of Missouri track team will meet the Kansas Aggies here the morning of May 5 as the opening attraction of the High School Day program, according to an announcement by Athletic Director Z. G. Clevenger. The State interscholastic track and field meet preliminaries will also be held in the morning, and the main events in the afternoon.

Former Champion Loses.

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., Dec. 30.—William Reekie of Upper Montclair, N. J., former New Jersey golf champion, yesterday defeated Normal Maxwell of Philadelphia, former North and South titleholder, in the second round of the midwinter golf tournament, 7 and 5.

Lewis Announces Plans Have Been Completed for Bout With Dempsey

Wrestling Champion Shows Articles Signed by Jack Kearns, Manager of Heavyweight Boxing Titleholder—No Date or Place for Meeting Given Out.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 30.—Ed "Strangler" Lewis, champion wrestler, announced today that plans had been completed for the mixed match between Jack Dempsey and himself. Lewis produced signed articles covering the match, which were drawn at Wichita, and carried the signature of Jack Kearns, manager of Dempsey.

The articles, a sporting writer observed, "contained 1,000,000 rules as how the two are to behave themselves."

Lewis said: "We have made this match. There are only a few details to be worked out. You can think what you want about it, but when I meet the champion of the world in the fistic line, he will learn he is meeting the champion of the world in a style of combat that doesn't call for putting on gloves.

"I do not want to boast, but if I am thrown against the firing line with the world's champion pugilist, the people who like sports will get the same shock they received when Siki whipped Carpentier."

The date and place of the match were not announced.

Promoter Knows Nothing.

By the Associated Press.

WICHITA, Kan., Dec. 30.—Tom Law, wrestling promoter of Wichita, over whose signature a $300,000 offer for a mixed bout to be held in Wichita between Ed "Strangler" Lewis, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, and Jack Dempsey, champion heavyweight boxer of the world, was made to Jack Kearns, Dempsey's managed, on Dec. 17, knew nothing of signed articles drawn at Wichita for the bout, he said this morning.

Moran and Nilles To Battle Today

Heavyweight Championship of France at Stake—American Will Referee.

PARIS, Dec. 30.—For the first time in the history of French boxing an American referee, Hiram Johnson Jr., of California, will be the third man in the ring when Frank Moran and Marcel Nilles meet today to settle the heavyweight championship of France. The title is claimed by Nilles.

Moran has been training faithfully for the bout. He tips the scales at 192 pounds or seven pounds lighter than when he met Jack Johnson here in 1914. Nilles weighs 182. The winner of the fight will be matched against Joe Beckett.

SCHMOLL AND DIRINGER LEAD IN TENPIN EVENT

Schmoll and Diringer paced the bowlers in the doubles of the city scratch tournament on the Palace Alleys last night with a total of 1151, not high enough to put the pair among the leaders. In the singles, L. Schuff was high with a 595 count.

Talaber Beats Nestor.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.—Lou Talaber, middleweight, last night won a decision over Mike Nestor, Polish wrestler, in a six-round bout. Neither was able to pin the other to the mat. Last night's match settled a recent bout won by Talaber after the Polish wrestler had been stunned by a fall to the floor.

NAVY OFFICIALS GIVE OUT SCHEDULES IN FIVE BRANCHES OF ATHLETICS

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 30.—The Athletic Board of the United States Naval Academy announced the schedules for 1923, in five branches of sport. They are rowing, swimming, boxing, wrestling and gymnastics. The feature event of the crew will be the triangular race between Harvard, Princeton and Navy to be raced at Princeton, May 8. The boxing team will meet a Canadian squad composed of students from Toronto, McGill and Queens universities. The schedules follow, all events to be held at home unless otherwise stated:

BOXING—Feb. 3 and 10 (open); 17, Pennsylvania State at State College; 24, Massachusetts Tech.; March 3, Canadians-Combined teams at Toronto, McGill and Queens universities; 10, University of Pennsylvania.

WRESTLING—Feb. 10, Lehigh; 17, Washington and Lee; 24, Penn State; 28, Indiana (tentative); March 3, West Virginia University; 10 (open); 17, Cornell at Ithaca.

SWIMMING—Feb. 10, Syracuse; 17, Massachusetts Tech; 24 (open); March 3, Rutgers; 10 (open); 17, Yale; 24, Intercollegiates (place yet to be decided).

GYMNASTICS—Feb. 3, Philadelphia Turnverein; 10, University of Penn; 21, Dartmouth; 24, Massachusetts Tech; March 3, New York University; March 10 (open); 17 and 19 (or 23 and 24), Intercollegiates.

ROWING—April 1, University of Penn. varsity and freshmen; 28, Massachusetts Tech; May 8, Harvard-Princeton at Princeton; 19, Syracuse, varsity and freshmen.

Dundee Wins Over O'Brien.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 30.—Johnny Dundee, Junior lightweight champion, last night easily outboxed Tommy O'Brien, California, in a 10-round no-decision bout which went the limit. The Easterner weighed 131¼ and O'Brien 134 pounds. Dundee had an apparent advantage in nearly every round and in the seventh drove O'Brien to the floor with a right blow to the head. O'Brien's best rounds were the fourth and eighth, in which he traded punches but inflicted no damage.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—San Antonio has called for bids on the new $20,000 clubhouse that will be built on the municipal course at Breckenridge Park.

Rube Benton Not Wanted in N. L. Heydler Asserts

Majority of Clubs Against Return of Pitcher, President of Circuit Announces.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 30.—B. B. Johnson, president of the American League; August Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati National League club, and "Rube" Benton were to hold a conference in Herrmann's office here today, which, it was expected, would settle the question of Benton's status and his right to pitch for the Cincinnati club.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—John A. Heydler, president of the National League, confirmed yesterday the reports that "Rube" Benton isn't wanted in his circuit.

The southpaw pitcher, reported to be on the way from St. Paul of the American Association to Cincinnati in the National League in the effort of Garry Herrmann to strengthen his team for the battle against the Giants in 1923, isn't wanted in the American League, either. Ban Johnson sidetracked a deal that would have landed Benton with the Yankees.

Early reports from Chicago said Commissioner Landis had nothing in his records against Benton, but later came a statement that there would be an investigation of Benton's betting activities in the "crooked" world's series of 1919.

If this is the reason for the National League's stand, Heydler wouldn't make it public yesterday. But he seemed certain that Benton would not be seen in a National League uniform next season. All he would say for publication was this:

Deal Will Not Be Made.

"As far as I know, the deal of the Cincinnati club with St. Paul of the American Association for the release of Benton has not been closed and I feel confident it will not be consummated, if the Cincinnati club is advised that a majority of the league clubs do not favor Benton's return to the National League."

And Heydler seemed even more confident than the statement made it, that the club owners would vote thumbs down on the North Carolina left-hander, despite Herrmann's request for a medal to Benton for refusing to throw a game.

Little else was talked of in baseball circles than the plan of Garry Herrmann to get Benton back into the big leagues against the wishes of Johnson, his former close companion in the old National Commission, and against the wishes of the other club owners in his own circuit.

When the word came from Chicago that Commissioner Landis will reopen the case involving the bets that Benton is alleged to have made on the crooked series of 1919, on tips from "Bill" Burns, there was a general feeling that a series of stories of scandal that will make the winter season shorter to the ball fans is sure to follow.

Told Different Stories.

This betting accusation against Benton was made by Ban Johnson recently, when he told the reason why he had asked two American League clubs, one the Yankees, to "lay off" on obtaining Benton. Benton testified before the Chicago grand jury which considered the case of the White Sox game throwers that he had won only $20 on the series. However, he was said to have told different stories here in a formal appearance before President Heydler and the latter said after Benton had testified before the grand jury that the pitcher had either perjured himself then or lied to him (Heydler). Benton never made any reply to this.

As to the game for which Herrmann says Benton should be given a medal for winning, there is some doubt as to just which one it was. It is said to have been a game in Chicago in the waning days of 1919, when the Reds had almost clinched the pennant and the Giants were running a poor second. According to Benton's story, he was approached the night before by two of his fellow club members—one is said to have been Hal Chase, who has since left baseball—and offered an aggregate of $800 if he would "throw" his battle with the Cubs the next day. He refused, so Herrmann says for him, and went out, pitched his best and won.

What the Records Show.

Records show that on Sept. 11, 1919, Benton pitched against the Cubs in Chicago and beat Grover Cleveland Alexander, 7 to 3.

It is of interest to note that this game followed one that Fred Toney referred to when he made the charge that he had been offered several hundred dollars to cheat.

"If Benton was so honest about the Chicago game, why did he wait until long after, on a training trip in the South, to tell about it?" asked a National League magnate yesterday. "He waited till the men who approached him had been banished from baseball. His contradictory stories on a lot of things probably are the reason why our league doesn't care to have him around any more."

MAIN TENDENCY OF PRICES UPWARD ON STOCK MARKET

Cash Sales Again in Evidence at Year-End Session — Fairly Good Demand for Copper Shares.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted financial review today says:

"The stock market advanced this morning with the volume of trading large for a pre-holiday Saturday. There was a gain of considerable number of cash sales, but for the most part attention was centered on the issues which have been speculative favorites during the year and almost without exception higher prices were the rule in this group. The bond market was also firm and the number of transactions somewhat above the usual Saturday morning business. All varieties of bonds shared in the general upward tendency, although there was nothing sensational about the gains made.

"The Clearing House statement for the week reports an increase in loans and discounts of $140,452,000 and an increase in aggregate reserve of $6,654,060. Net demand deposits increased $174,996,000 and reserve of member banks with the Federal Reserve Bank increase $29,975,000.

"There was a fair amount of activity in the foreign exchange market as sterling, francs and marks were concerned, sterling moved up ½ cent to $4.64 while French francs were 6 points higher at 7.34 cents. Italian lire were also firmer and German marks were quoted at .014 against .015 yesterday. Other exchanges were quiet, the cotton exchange was closed for the holidays and trading in grain of a holiday nature. May contracts opened firm, but later receded somewhat on profit-taking as the market closed. The trend was uncertain and prices were barely steady.

ACTIVE SESSION ON CURB AS YEAR DRAWS TO CLOSE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The closing session of the year on the Curb Exchange was one of the most active two-hour periods that the market has witnessed in many months.

Prices throughout the greater part of the list advanced sharply as the result of the buying back of stocks that had been sold recently for the purpose of establishing tax losses. When the demand for these shares made itself felt right after the opening, those who had sold in previous sessions found that they had to bid prices up in order to buy back their holdings.

The advance of 25 cents in the price of crude oil to $2.25 a barrel also had a stimulating effect upon the oil group and these were the leaders in the later movement. Standard of Indiana reached a new high record at 60⅞, which is equivalent to 121 prior to the 100 per cent stock dividend payment. The stocks most prominent were Standard of California new, International Pete, Vacuum Oil new and Standard of New York new.

Gulf Oil of Pennsylvania featured the independent group, running up to a new high record for the present movement on short covering and the buying back by those who had temporarily relinquished their holdings. Merritt Oil was another that displayed surprising activity, getting much close to 10. City Service and Salt Creek Producers were others that came in for attention.

Peerless Motor was again strong and gained while the Durants both reached higher levels. Stutz, although not as active as others of this group, gained almost a point. Radio issues were in demand.

Dry Goods Market Review.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—There was very little business done in the cotton cloths market today, but there was a continued firmness in the sateens and twill markets. Sheetings were firm. Bag manufacturers preferred to buy for later delivery than most mills care to sell at this time. There was but a sprinkle of orders for tire fabrics.

There was no drop today in the higher prices that developed on Friday in the raw silk market. Prices were unchanged. The market was dull as was expected. Yokohama reported improved activity and a fair volume of sales.

Stock Selling Commission Rate.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—The Committee on Commissions of the New York Stock Exchange has fixed commissions on all stocks selling for less than $1 and not less than 50 cents at 3 cents per share. On stocks selling for less than 50 cents the commission may be optionally agreed upon.

GRAINS END HIGHER IN YEAR-END TRADE

December wheat ended the year at $1.21¼ asked, on the Merchants' Exchange. There was fair range to other futures, but the close was higher. Distant corn futures also were higher. December corn went out at 72½c asked. There was evening up business in all deliveries over the holidays.

In local cash grain market red winter wheat was steady. There was light demand. Hard wheat was 1c lower. Cash corn was steady to ½c lower. Demand was fair. Cash oats were steady to a shade easier. Demand was fair.

May wheat sold off a cent in the early period and then came back partially. July rebounded to above the previous close. Corn futures early were under the previous day's close. Liverpool opened 1d lower on wheat and closed ⅝ to 1d net lower. There was evening-up trade here over the year end.

The three Northwestern markets combined today had 1137 acres of wheat, compared with 1312 a week ago and 584 last year. Minneapolis today receiving 370 cars, Duluth 138 and Winnipeg 629.

Local wheat receipts, which were 132,000 compared with 146,400 a week ago and 64,900 last year, included 56 cars local and 54 through. Corn receipts which were 130,000 compared with 127,400 a week ago and 754,000 last year, included 87 cars local and 13 through. ERRATIC MARKET FOR WHEAT AT CLOSING OF THE YEAR

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.—December wheat furnished a little thrill for the bystander today. The start was a little higher, but a 4c break followed immediately by a 3c reaction. Throughout the remainder of the session a seesaw motion was maintained in the price of the current delivery. The action in the deferred contracts also was erratic. There was further selling at the opening, but support was uncovered and this caused shorts to want to take profits. Around the previous closing level there was enough selling to check the upturn. Milling demand for wheat was slow, but a local shipper sold 30,000 bushels to an exporter, the first worked in some time. Receipts of wheat continue of heavy volume. Market closed half cent off to 1¼c up. December $1.20@1.25⅝, May $1.22⅝@1.22⅞, July $1.13⅞@1.13⅞.

Corn was again well supported. December had a dip at the start after an advance, and then prices rallied to a new high level. The fact that January corn sold at 6c discount suggests inflation of the current delivery. The late months started lower, but rallied on local buying. Discounts for No. 2 corn were lower. Shipping sales were 35,000 bushels. Market closed ⅛@1⅛c up. December 75⅞c, May 72⅜@72½c, July 72⅝c.

Oats followed the other grains, a leading elevator interest was reported supporting the market on the weak spots. Shipping demand was better with sales of 340,000 bushels reported. Market closed ⅛c off to ⅛c up. December 45c, May 44¾@45c, July 42⅝c.

Provisions followed the trend of grain. Trade was slow. Lard closed 10@12½c up and ribs 5c off to 2½c up.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY [illegible]

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—[illegible] morning's continued [illegible] buoyancy in the Stock [illegible] dealings there were at least [illegible] explanations. First, the [illegible] relieved from so-called "tax [illegible]" which had been going on [illegible] month, and the latter [illegible] had come to establish [illegible] hurriedly buying back. [illegible] New Year predictions [illegible] business outlook were [illegible] come in and all of them [illegible] timistic. There was the [illegible] ment of a 25-cent-per-barrel [illegible] in Pennsylvania crude oil [illegible] bore out a little ahead of [illegible] pectations long held, that [illegible] oil prices was near. Oil [illegible] urally took the lead, but [illegible] was especially vigorous [illegible] which had suffered most [illegible] tax selling. At the same [illegible] was an allround resumption of [illegible] activities.

It was the liveliest two [illegible] fact, that Wall street has seen [illegible] the culmination of the autumn [illegible] paign. The activity lay mainly [illegible] speculative lines.

The foreign exchanges were [illegible] ally higher, French francs [illegible] ing for the third day in succession. [illegible]

Even marks went higher, [illegible] of the achievement of the [illegible] Reichsbank in putting its [illegible] circulation across the trillion [illegible]. The buying movement in the [illegible] market kept on with undiminished intensity up to the close.

Sharp advances in the [illegible] tire group were a feature of the [illegible] quarter of an hour. The old [illegible] baker and other leaders left [illegible] up to the top.

The Bond Market.

Under the stimulus of what [illegible] apparently genuine [illegible] demand bond prices made [illegible] tial advances today. Liberty [illegible] were all firm and higher. The [illegible] exempt 3½s in particular [illegible] demand. The rise in the first [illegible] being 26 cents on the $100 [illegible] first 4¼s crossed 99. The [illegible] third and fourth 4¼s sold [illegible] slightly below that figure. [illegible] fourth 4¼s were [illegible] High-grade railroad bonds [illegible] the improvement, Atchison [illegible] 4s moving up toward a [illegible] cent basis. The demand for [illegible] class of security must come [illegible] trustees and savings banks [illegible] restricted to legal investment [illegible] individual purchaser subject [illegible] come tax can get a higher [illegible] elsewhere.

Foreign bonds generally were [illegible] much changed. It is worthy of [illegible] that French bonds have not [illegible] affected by all the [illegible] American aid to Europe. [illegible]

The St. Paul issues [illegible] their advance began [illegible] days ago. Nor was there any [illegible] ening of the pace. Puget [illegible] gained more than 2 points [illegible] ket Street Railway 5s and [illegible] Railway 5s were firm. [illegible] tube 7s gained ground [illegible] dustrials.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

ILLINOIS SOLDIER.—Write the Bonus Commission, Springfield, Ill., regarding your bonus.

REGULAR SUBSCRIBER.—St. Louis University football team played Notre Dame, Oct. 7, this season. The score was 26 to 0 in favor of Notre Dame.

BEE BUSY.—Information regarding New York Pasteurization laws can be obtained by directing your query to the New York World, New York City.

X. Y. Z.—You can obtain full information about employment of secret service men at the office of the Civil Service Commission, Old Custom House, Third and Olive streets.

MUSICAL.—If you wish to be sure the violin is worth the price asked, before you purchase it get an experts' opinion. Take it to some violin dealer.

G. A.—Paper is rendered fireproof by saturating it with a solution of ammonia sulphate 8 parts, boracic acid 3 parts, borax 2 parts, water 100 parts. For the same purpose sodium tungstate may also be employed.

ANXIOUS.—There are 575,932 war-time insurance policies in force according to the last report of the Director of Veterans' Bureau. Up to date of this report 58,675 death compensation claims had been allowed, representing a monthly payment of about $1,350,000 or $26.31 per case. Sixty-five per cent of the men who applied for vocational training in the first year it was offered (1919) are still on the rolls.

HOLIDAY.—The following is an excellent fruit punch: 9 oranges, 6 lemons, 1 cup grated pineapple, 1 cup raspberry syrup, 1½ cups tea infusion, 1¼ cups sugar, 1 cup hot water, 1 quart Apollinaris. Mix the juice of the oranges and lemons with pineapple, raspberry syrup and tea; then add a syrup made by boiling sugar and water 15 minutes. Turn in punch bowl over a large piece of ice. Chill thoroughly and just before serving add Apollinaris.

MANUFACTURER.—A marshmallow paste is made as follows: ¾ cup sugar, ¼ cup milk, ¼ pound marshmallows, 2 tablespoons hot water, ½ teaspoon vanilla. Put sugar and milk in a saucepan, heat slowly to boiling point without stirring, and boil 6 minutes. Break the marshmallows in pieces and melt in a double boiler, add hot water, and cook until the mixture is smooth, then add the hot syrup gradually, stirring constantly. Beat until cool enough to spread, then add vanilla. This may be used for both filling and frosting.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

OUT DOORS.—You will need a peddler's license to sell from house to house.

MRS. H.—The household goods being held for room rent must be held for 90 days, and then can be sold after due notice at a public sale.

CARE TO KNOW.—There is no difference in the terms "water license" and "water taxes" as used by the City Water Department.

S. R. H.—1. A person can have 25 ducks in his possession at any one time. 2. He may have 25 ducks and 15 quail. 3. The season for quail is open between Nov. 10 and Dec. 31.

GASSY.—You can obtain full information regarding this at the City Counselor's office at the city hall. The facts are too long to publish in this column.

NEW CITIZEN.—If they both are violating the law, and if the wife was fined as well as the husband, the property of both and not merely the husband's part can be sold to pay the fine.

SUBSCRIBER.—1. The summons could legally be served on him only if the corporation was doing business in Missouri in a legal sense. The corporation should consult a lawyer. 2. Ordinarily the salesman's employment would date from the time of his acceptance of the position, if there was nothing to the contrary in his agreement with them.

E. F. G.—Your savings bank account and time certificates can be assessed for personal taxes even though you make no return. The whole amount is taxed. If a personal tax is not paid in the year when due, the city adds 1 per cent per month as interest, thereafter, and can sue you for the amount of the tax and interest.

WORRIED SUBSCRIBER.—You can pay the agency's charge in installments. The contract which you signed is not binding on you, as you are a minor, and they will not be able to sue you or to garnish your wages. If they sue you or if they persist in annoying you at the office, ask the Free Legal Aid Bureau in the Municipal Courts Building to help you.

A. E. X.—There are a very few parts of the city in the extreme north and south ends where a frame house can be built. There is a map showing them in the Building Commissioner's office at the city hall which you can see. Frame houses cannot be built where there are brick houses on both sides of the street. Write to the Mayor of each suburb regarding building frame houses in that suburb.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

H. H. C.—Yeast is of service in a good many derangements of the health, whether it would be better than something else in an ailment of the stomach would depend upon what the ailment was.

M. A. A.—1. The treatment mentioned would not cure pimples. 2. There is generally no after effect. 3. Yes, if the doctor understands the operation. 4. Different physicians have different rates of fee, but it should not exceed $15 if the patient is in moderate circumstances.

C. A. L.—1. This condition may be simply an abnormality. 2. It is not dangerous unless the increase in size is due to a growth. If such a growth exists it can be felt. 3. There is no danger of cancer unless a growth is present.

T. D.—1. Hodgkins Disease is especially an anemia with enlargement of the lymphatic glands, not associated with an increase in the colorless corpuscles of the blood. 2. The disease is ultimately fatal, but the course varies greatly. 3. We do not know of any cure.

ANCIOUS.—It is not uncommon for such an operation as you mention to cause decided nervous disturbance. Yours is perhaps an aggravated case. Usually this disturbance passes within a year. Hypodermics of corpus lutem should be of service to you. The suggestion of 4 cholelith pills night and morning is also made.

READER.—The best "blood tonic" depends upon the object sought to be accomplished. Blood tonics are in reality appetite tonics as food makes blood, not the tonic taken. Cod liver oil is perhaps the best because it is a food. A teaspoonful, not more, should be taken after meals. Keep the oil in a cool place and keep the cork and bottle clean.

WAGNER ELECTRIC RECEIVERSHIP SUIT DISMISSED

Petitioners Objected to Transfer of Assets of the Company to a New Corporation.

PLAINTIFFS ACTED TOO LATE, COURT SAYS

Opinion States They Sat by and Permitted Completion of Deal After Having Advance Notice.

A suit filed Nov. 18 by several stockholders of the Wagner Electric Manufacturing Co., asking for a receiver for that corporation, was dismissed today by Circuit Judge Hall, who also dissolved a temporary restraining order prohibiting ratification of a reorganization of the business. The petitioners objected to a transfer of assets of the company to a new corporation which was organized under the laws of Delaware.

The decision states that the transfer of assets, which actually took place on Aug. 11 last, was nothing short of consolidation of the old and new companies and had plaintiffs made application prior to the transfer at a time when they had several months' advance notice of what was about to take place, there would have been no question as to their rights in the matter.

"But the plaintiffs," the opinion holds, "were guilty of neglect and to now attempt to undo that which they sat by and permitted to be done would be productive of a great deal more injury to strangers to the entire transaction who have gone into the market and purchased stock and other securities of the new organization than any good that could possibly come from such action by the court."

Plaintiffs in the Case.

The plaintiffs were James P. Newell as administrator of the estate of R. C. Kerens; John S. Leahy, representing his own and other interests, and I. M. Greer, owner of about $12,000 of Wagner stock. They opposed the plan of reorganization, alleging that it was not fair to the shareholders, whose stock, they said, would be greatly depreciated. It appeared that reorganization was necessary for the purpose of refinancing the business.

The company was incorporated in the '90s with a capital stock of $25,000, which grew until at the time of the transfer the capital stock was $6,000,000, the increase being partly through stock dividends and partly by sale of other stock. The common stock at one time was as high as $286 a share. The president of the company, Waldo A. Layman, owned 4000 shares, which he retained through a fluctuating market, which reached as low at $20 a share. This, the court said, was evidence of Layman's loyalty to the company and that his interest was more than a stock-jobbing one.

Board of Directors Increased.

Evidence introduced by the defense at the trial was that the company's financial trouble began in December, 1920, when it became hard pressed by creditors, although the book value of its assets largely exceeded liabilities. About this time the board of directors was increased from seven to 11 so that creditor banks might place upon the board certain representatives in order to supervise expenditure of money and additional loans required to prevent a business failure. It was charged by the plaintiffs that the representatives of the banks sought to control the company for the benefit of the banks, but the court states that there was no evidence to prove that any bank representatives were guilty of an abuse of trust or was actuated by any but an honest motive to promote the best interests of the company for its creditors and stockholders.

"It is common knowledge," Judge Hall declares, "that where profits of a corporation are not large enough to take care of general outstanding expenses and enable the corporation to discount its bills it must go to the money market (banks) for support. It is not an unusual thing to find large industries sponsored by banking institutions with their representatives on the board. The banker owes it to his depositors to keep a watchful eye upon the investment into which the depositors' money goes, and he would be derelict in his duty were he to do otherwise."

Indebtedness Once Was $5,000,000.

At one time, it was disclosed, the Wagner company was indebted $5,000,000, which was reduced more than $3,000,000. The banks insisted that the company be refinanced so that their claims of $3,750,000 might be paid and a proposition to refinance, which was made by the brokerage firm of Smith, Moore & Co., was accepted. The plan was that a new company be formed to assume obligations of the old with reference to bonds and other indebtedness and to issue $1,500,000 of preferred stock, which was to be sold. Proceeds from the sale of stock and receipts from a bond issue of $2,500,000 were to go to liquidate the indebtedness of the company and put it on a sound working basis.

The new company, it was provided, was to issue 80,000 shares of non-par stock, 58,277 shares of which were to be distributed to shareholders of the old corporation, being share for share of the common stock. They also were to participate in another 20,000 shares, and 10,000 shares were to go to the underwriting syndicate as a bonus. The proposition was agreed to by the directors and a vote of 92 per cent of the stock. It was admitted that the plaintiffs, Leahy and Greer, objected throughout the entire proceedings, they contending that the old company was not in an insolvent condition. However, they did not go to court with their objection until the deal had been put through, and stock and bonds of the new company were offered for sale.

According to President Layman, the Wagner company did an average gross business of $15,000,000 a year and was in a very prosperous condition until the fall of 1920, when the general business depression affected it. It is now said to be getting back on its feet and has succeeded in greatly reducing its indebtedness.

SYMPHONY CONCERT BY RADIO TONIGHT

Artistic Program by Church of Divine Science Singers Well Received.

A program of more than usual excellence, which was broadcast from Station K S D last night, was presented by two members of the choir of the Church of Divine Science. The singers were Mrs. D. Scott Geddis, soprano, and Harry P. Smith, tenor. The program included ballads, sacred songs and grand opera arias and was presented in an artistic manner. Both singers possess highly trained and beautifully modulated voices, which showed to especially charming advantage in their concerted numbers. A Christmas feature of the program was a reading of Henry Van Dyke's "The Mansion," which was given by Mrs. E. C. Teuscher. So many compliments were received during the rendition of the program that the telephone in the reception room of Station K S D was kept busy receiving these calls.

Tonight's program will consist of the broadcasting of the concert of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra given at the Odeon. There will be no broadcasting on Sunday evening or midnight, but on New Year's afternoon, evening and midnight, special artists' program will be given. Complete schedule of these concerts with the participants therein will be announced tomorrow.

CHICAGO POLICEMAN KILLED AFTER MAN WOUNDS GIRL

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.—A policeman was killed and one of three men who fired upon a party of high school students, slightly wounding a girl, was shot probably fatally here early today in the ensuing pistol fight with the policeman.

The high school students were returning from a dance at their school when the three men set upon them. One man was said to have accosted Minnie Finkelstein, 17 years old. When the girl remonstrated, the man's two companions joined him and he was reported to have begun firing. Miss Finkelstein was struck in the hip. Then the three men fled.

William J. O'Malley, probationary policeman, was shot as he gave chase.

BIG DECLINE IN DRY LAW CASES IN STATE COURTS

Only $4500 (Estimated) in Fines in 1922, Against Total of $15,000 for 1921, Report Shows.

The tendency in 1922 to try cases of prohibition law violation in the Federal Court rather than the State Court is shown in the report of fines and costs collected in the Court of Criminal Correction, State tribunal to which cases under the Missouri bone-dry law are assigned, made today by Clerk Knittel.

The total of fines and costs collected in cases of all sorts in 1922 was $6285.69, compared with $19,578.77 last year. Liquor fines constitute the bulk of this; such fines were estimated at $4300 for 1922, compared with $15,000 last year. All fines and costs collected in this court are turned over to the schools.

All State liquor cases are tried in Judge Miller's division of the Court of Criminal Correction. The record of liquor cases disposed of in 1922, some having come over from the preceding year, follows: Sixty-four cases nolle prossed, chiefly because searches for evidence were considered illegal, Miss Lena Frank, assistant Prosecuting Attorney, said; 12 tried by jury, with seven acquittals and five fines upon conviction, running as high as $400, resulting, two of the convictions being under appeal; 44 fines in all, including cases under pleas of guilty, and five workhouse sentences; 74 dismissed upon payment of costs, 26 discharged by the Court, 8 dismissed for want of prosecution, 25 stayed on payment of costs, 3 defendants paroled.

Prosecuting Attorney Oakley's office issued 225 warrants under the bone-dry law during 1922.

State and Federal authorities recently announced a plan to bring every liquor violation case possible in the Federal Court. This is because of the tendency of juries in the State court to acquit offenders, it was explained. The result would be to deprive the public schools of a source of revenue and to clog the Federal Court docket so that other Federal criminal laws would become virtually inoperative, officials said. Fines paid in Federal Court go into the United States Treasury. The average of fines paid in Federal liquor cases here since the Volstead act went into effect has been $62,686 a year.

PRESTON M. BRUNER DIES

Preston M. Bruner, 77 years old, president of the Bruner Granitoid Co., 524 Frisco Building, died at 12:55 p. m. yesterday at his home, 5143 Maple avenue, of the infirmities of age. He had been in failing health for the last six months and had been confined to his bed for six weeks.

Bruner entered the granitoid contracting business here in 1878. The funeral will be at 2 p. m., Tuesday, from funeral parlors at 4449 Olive street to Valhalla Cemetery. Bruner is survived by five children, Robert W., Edwin E., Daniel E. and Mrs. John Borgsteadt, all of St. Louis, and Preston M. Jr., of San Francisco.

23 Doctors Involved in Liquor Plot.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 30.—Twenty-three physicians and five druggists are involved in a report covering the investigation of the wholesale forging of liquor prescriptions in Minneapolis, it is announced.

TICKET PLAN FOR TRAFFIC VIOLATION CASES IS DEVISED

Policeman Will Hand Driver a Summons to Be Signed, Instead of Taking Him to Station.

Chief of Police O'Brien today announced that a working agreement had been reached between the Police Court Judges and the Police Department on a ticket arrest system for violators of traffic regulations, and that the system would be put in use as soon as the new summons blanks could be printed.

The plan is to hand a violator a summons to appear in Police Court instead of taking him to a station. The person arrested is to sign the summons and copies will be made for the arresting officer and the Police Court.

A similar system was in use here several years ago, but was discontinued because persons summoned failed to appear in court and a second call was necessary to bring them in. Thus, the chief object—saving time for the police and the person arrested—was frustrated.

However, at that time the Police Department had no definite understanding with the Police Judges, and the summons was not considered legal. The system now to be tried was worked out in consultation with the legislative committee of the Safety Council. At a meeting of the Executive Committee yesterday, Oliver T. Remmers, chairman, said the summons arrest had been termed legal and was technically, as much an arrest as the station arrest.

Record Will Be Complete.

Chief O'Brien said a complete record of the persons summoned would be kept. The blanks, when signed by the violator, will be equivalent to a bond. There will be spaces for information identifying the violator and automobile.

Persons not answering the summons will be fined at least $25, Chief O'Brien said. "I believe the system will save time, and prove effective," he said.

Persons who fail to appear in court will be arrested and required to give bond. The Safety Council Committee, which investigated the ticket system and urged its readoption, also included City Counselor Haid and Roy F. Britton, general counsel for the Automobile Club of Missouri.

Judge Mix's Charges Taken Up.

Recent charges by Police Judge Mix that members of the Safety Council are the "champion fronters" in Police Court in behalf of traffic violators, were discussed at the Executive Committee meeting yesterday, and many members spoke in favor of investigating the allegations with a view to "cleaning our own house first." A report concerning the charges is to be returned at the committee's meeting next Friday, Charles M. Talbert, chairman of the Executive Committee, said.

E. J. Wallace, former chairman of the Citizens' Safety Committee of One Hundred, which voted to separate from the council, was elected to membership on the Executive Committee.

Funeral of Joseph D. Brenton.

The funeral of Joseph D. Brenton, 52 years old, who was killed Thursday when he fell 28 feet from a scaffold to the concrete bottom of a passenger elevator in the new Catholic orphanage at Alton, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow from his residence, 3116A New Ashland place, to Park Lawn Cemetery. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alice V. Brenton.

Coue Cites Ancient Cases to Prove "Cures" Are Permanent

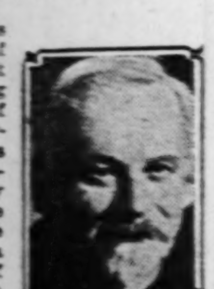

"Day by Day In Every Way I Am Getting Better and Better"

No Return of Ailments Recorded in Several Remarkable Examples —Gout Victim Rides Bike After First Treatment and Never Comes Back to Say Thanks—Asthma and Paralysis Helped by Autosuggestion.

ARTICLE XVII

By Dr. Emile Coue.

TO all of us demonstrations are more convincing than unsupported theories, however logically the latter may be set forth. Throughout this series of articles, therefore, I have, from time to time, cited from the mass of case-histories in my possession certain records of individual treatments bearing on the particular phase of autosuggestion under discussion at such times.

DR EMILE COUE

However, this method must, of course, leave out many striking examples of cures and recoveries by means of autosuggestion. It is my aim, therefore to put before the public now a collection of these cases from my medical records which shall be comprehensive in the varieties of ailments treated, though compact because of space limitations.

Naturally I have kept in mind, also, during the selection, the more remarkable of the cases.

Mlle. M. D., of Troyes, had suffered for eight years from asthma, which obliged her to sit up in bed nearly all night, fighting for breath. Preliminary experiments show that she is a sensitive subject. She sleeps immediately the suggestion is given. From the first treatment there is an enormous improvement. The patient has a good night, only interrupted by one attack of asthma which only lasts a quarter of an hour. In a very short time the asthma disappears completely and there is no relapse later on.

M. M., living at Sainte-Savine near Troyes, paralyzed for two years as the result of injuries at the junction of the spinal column and the pelvis. The paralysis is only in the lower limbs, in which the circulation of the blood has practically ceased, making them swollen, congested, and discolored. Several treatments have been tried without success. Preliminary experiments successful; Suggestion applied by me, and Autosuggestion by the patient for eight days. At the end of this time there is an almost imperceptible but still appreciable movement of the left leg. Renewed suggestion. In eight days the improvement is noticeable. Every week or fortnight there is an increased improvement with progressive lessening of the swelling, and so on. Eleven months afterwards (Nov. 1, 1906), the patient goes downstairs alone and walks 800 yards, and in July, 1907, goes back to the factory where he has continued to work since that time, with no trace of paralysis.

Gout Victim Rides Bicycle

Mme. D——, at Troyes, about 30 years of age. She is in the last stages of consumption, and grows thinner daily in spite of special nourishment. She suffers from coughing and spitting, and has difficulty in breathing; in fact, from all appearances she has only a few months to live. Preliminary experiments show great sensitiveness, and suggestion is followed by immediate improvement. From the next day the morbid symptoms begin to lessen. Every day the improvement becomes more marked and the patient rapidly puts on flesh, although she no longer takes special nourishment. In a few months the cure is apparently complete.

M. E—— of Troyes. An attack of gout; the right ankle is inflamed and painful, and he is unable to walk. The preliminary experiments show him to be a very sensitive subject. After the first treatment he is able to regain, without the help of his stick, the carriage which brought him, and the pain has ceased. The next day he does not return, as I had told him to do. Afterwards his wife comes alone and tells me that that morning her husband had got up, put on his shoes, and gone off on his bicycle to visit his yards (he is a painter). It is needless to tell you my utter astonishment.

(I was not able to follow up this case, as the patient never deigned to come and see me again or to thank me, but some time afterward I heard that he had had no relapse.)

Mme. P——, at Laneuveville. Pains in the kidneys and the knees. The illness dates from 10 years back and is becoming worse every day. Suggestion from me, and Autosuggestion from herself. The improvement is immediate, and increases progressively. The cure is obtained rapidly, and is a "permanent" one.

Regains Power of Speech

Mme. Z—— of Nancy fell ill in January, 1910, with congestion of the lungs, from which she had not recovered two months later. She suffers from general weakness, loss of appetite, bad digestive trouble, rare and difficult bowel action, insomnia, copious night-sweats. After the first suggestion, the patient feels much better, and two days later she returns and tells me that she feels quite well. Every trace of illness has disappeared, and all the organs are functioning normally. Three or four times she had been on the point of sweating, but each time prevented it by the use of Conscious Autosuggestion. From this time Mme. Z—— has enjoyed perfectly good health.

(I have purposely chosen some cases dating considerable time back, in order to show that the cures are apparently "permanent.")

M. X——, at Belfort, cannot talk for more than 10 minutes or a quarter of an hour without becoming completely aphonous. Different doctors consulted find no lesion in the vocal organs, but one of them says that M. X—— suffers from senility of the larynx, and this conclusion confirms him in the belief that he is incurable. He comes to spend his holidays at Nancy, and a lady of my acquaintance advises him to come and see me. He refuses at first, but eventually consents in spite of his absolute disbelief in the efforts of suggestion. I treat him in this way nevertheless, and ask him to return two days afterwards. He comes back on the appointed day, and tells me that the day before he was able to converse the whole afternoon without becoming aphonous. Two days later he returns again to say that his trouble had not reappeared, although he had not only conversed a great deal but even sung the day before. The cure still holds good and I am convinced that it will always do so.

Disciple Effects Healings

M. D——, at Jarville. Paralysis of the left upper eyelid. Goes to the hospital where he receives injections, as a result of which the eyelid is raised. The left eye was, however, deflected outwards for more than 45 degrees, and an operation seemed to be necessary. It was at this moment that he came to me, and, thanks to Autosuggestion, the eye went back little by little to its normal position.

Mlle. X—— of Geneva, aged 13. Sore on the temple considered by several doctors as being of tubercular origin; for a year and a half it has refused to yield to different treatments ordered. She is taken to M. Baudouin, a follower of M. Coue at Geneva, who treats her by suggestion and tells her to return in a week. When she comes back the sore has healed.

Mlle. Z——, also of Geneva. Has had the right leg drawn up for 17 years, owing to an abscess above the knee, which had had to be operated upon. She asks M. Boudouin to treat her by suggestion, and hardly has he begun when the leg can be bent and unbent in a normal manner. (There was, of course, a psychological cause in this case.)

Peter Gives Some Good Advice

By Thornton W. Burgess

Good advice is always needed
But, alas! is seldom heeded.

—Peter Rabbit.

"HAVE you ever spent a winter in the North before, Welcome Robin?" asked Peter Rabbit.

Welcome looked sadly out over the cedar swamp in which Peter Rabbit had found him and shook his head. "Of course not," said he. "I have told you why I am staying this year. Had it not been for that accident I wouldn't have thought of such a thing."

"Did—did Mrs. Robin stay with you?" ventured Peter.

"I should hope not!" replied Welcome. "Do you suppose I would allow her to stay up here in the cold just because I must? She did stay until I made her go. She was with the last of our relatives to start for the Sunny South."

Peter became very thoughtful. He sat scratching a long ear with a long hindfoot. He scratched and scratched and scratched and scratched.

"Is there something the matter with that ear of yours?" Welcome at last asked.

Peter chuckled. "No, Welcome," said he. "That ear is quite all right. I am thinking; that's all."

"I have heard of such a thing, but until now I didn't know how it was done," retorted Welcome. Then both laughed.

"Yes," said Peter, "I was thinking. I was thinking of you."

"How nice!" chirped Welcome Robin.

Peter paid no attention to the interruption. He went right on as if Welcome Robin hadn't spoken. "I was thinking," said he, "that as you have never spent the winter up here you may not know some things you ought to know. I am going to give you some advice. Of course, you can do as you please about acting on it, and of course you will. What you do isn't any business of mine and I don't want you to think, Welcome Robin, that I think it is. You see, it is just this way: If anything dreadful should happen to you because of something which you didn't know about which I might have told you I never would be able to forgive myself."

"Did—did Mrs. Robin stay with you?" ventured Peter.

Welcome Robin flew down a little nearer to Peter. "Peter," said he, "I will be very grateful for any advice you can give me."

Peter looked pleased. "In the first place," said he, "I advise you to keep out of sight as much as possible and stick closely to this old swamp. It will be easy for you to keep hidden here and you will find it the warmest place around. Also, when the fierce winter storms come you will be better protected here than anywhere else. You know how to watch out for your enemies in summer, but in winter it is a very different matter. Any time now Terror the Goshawk may appear and he is a terror, and no mistake. When the weather gets very bad up in the Far North Whitey the Snowy Owl is likely to come down this way and he hunts by day as well as by night. Then his big cousin, Hooty and Horned Owl, is more to be feared in winter than in summer, for food is scarce and he is sure to be hungry all the time. If you should go out on the edge of the Green Meadows Roughleg the Hawk, who has already come down from the Far North, might catch you. So far as possible keep it a secret that you are here in the cedar swamp. I guess that's all."

"Thank you," replied Welcome Robin. "I'll remember."

FRIED OYSTERS

LOOK over carefully for bits of shell. Do not lay on cloth or pat dry. Roll in flour, just as you finish looking over the oyster and lay on a dry cloth.

Place in flat shallow dish
Two eggs.
One-half cupful of evaporated milk.

Beat well and use this for dipping the oyster; then roll and pat gently while rolling the oyster in sifted breadcrumbs. Lay on clean dry paper and allow to stand for five minutes before cooking. If you prepare the oysters and then place the fat on to heat, this will be about the right time. The fat should be about 380 degrees Fahrenheit. This means a crust of bread will brown a deep brown while you count 15. Cook about three or four oysters at a time; more will cool the fat too quickly and permit it to soak into the oyster, and it is then unfit to eat. The time allowance for cooking the oyster is one minute.

If you will take the large size wire strainer with the wooden handle and bend the handle upright and flatten the bottom on the sieve on the table you will find this a splendid utensil to fry the oysters.

Use the soft paper napkin to turn the oysters on just as they come from the fat. This will absorb the excess fat.

Mrs. Elizabeth Buck has been appointed tipstaff in the Lancaster County (Pa.) Court.

THE HOUSE OF MOHUN

By George Gibbs.

CHAPTER XIX.
Alicia Revives.

FROM the despair with which Alicia Mohun had at first faced their situation, she now assumed an attitude of aggrieved acquiescence in whatever was proposed to her, but she contributed little of advice or encouragement to Cherry's conduct of affairs. It was difficult for Cherry to decide whether the initiative which had been so conspicuous in Alicia's social progress was now lacking by ineptitude or design; whether her talents, developed to master the intricacies of an exotic mode of life, had outgrown primitive conditions or whether the blow to her self-esteem had made her indifferent to the fate of her family. If she had relaxed into that state of indifference typified by dressing sacks, untidiness and supineness, her attitude would have been easier to define. But it was apparent that her vitality had been in no way impaired and that she still clung to the vestiges of her youth with an ardor in no sort abated. To Cherry, the ritual at the dressing-table was now the symbol of an aspiration which, ignoring the wreckage about her, still dwelt among the scenes of her former triumphs.

If Cherry had been disposed to be lenient she would perhaps have thought of her mother as a disappointed woman still clinging rather hopelessly to the remembrances of success. But the valiant struggle of the man whose name her mother bore, his courage, his belief in himself and his hope in them all, precluded more clearly her mother's rather childish inefficiencies. She did not mind if Alicia drove out with Mrs. Heywood, or if she went for afternoon tea to the houses of old friends, or if she accepted their invitations to luncheons or the theater. Since she was obviously unhappy within the house, it was better, even if her husband was neglected, that she should go out of it.

But Cherry did resent the attentions of John Chichester, which continued to be as persistent as they were incomprehensible. The facility with which he had transferred them from Cherry to her mother, and Alicia's tacit acceptance of them, led Cherry into bewildering mazes of thought. It was true that John Chichester had never proposed to Cherry. And she realized that it had always been her mother who had cultivated this intimacy as a part of her general campaign for her daughter's social career. Cherry could not believe, even now, that her mother had been actuated by any other purpose. But the frequency of Mr. Chichester's visits and the evident pleasure which each took in the society of the other had become more and more disturbing. At the very least, her mother's heedlessness was undignified and unbecoming; at the most, insensible and disloyal, in spirit, if not in letter, to the sick man. Cherry realized for the first time, with a strange qualm, that her mother was some years younger than her visitor, a fact quite evident when they were seen together.

If her father was aware of the thoughts in Cherry's mind he made no comment. He still spent much time in his own room writing, planning or conferring with visitors and seemed to have little time or thought for his wife or her occupations.

Cherry knew that her mother drove out with Mr. Chichester at least once a week; that he was frequently at the house in the afternoons, and she had reason to suspect that her mother sometimes met him elsewhere. But she did not choose to dignify her impatience by recriminations, and when she saw the visitor she made every effort to give him an amiable greeting. No word had ever passed between Chichester and Cherry, either of sentiment or of business, and, with the sudden cessation of his addresses, Cherry had assumed that her mother had made a proper use of her social graces in diverting the current of Chichester's vagrant affections into another channel. The ease with which this had been accomplished, though unflattering to her own self-esteem, had given Cherry a new measure of her mother's adaptability.

The despairing tears which she had shed on Cherry's account no longer flowed. Smiles had soon taken their place. She spoke no more of Cherry's ingratitude. It had seemed to Cherry that Alicia's acquiescence had too many of the elements of contentment to be above suspicion. What did her mother's new attitude mean? What had been the motive of the conversations with Mr. Chichester, who had restored her mother to calmness and self-complacency? Her references to Chichester were above criticism, but they opened the door to disturbing queries as to the influences which might have been the cause of his generosity. He had taken up some notes of Mohun and Company which one of the banks had held. And if generous as to this, why not as to the matter of the personal loan which had been the cause of Cherry's rebellion?

The thought of that loan still worried Cherry—more even than her own failures in the struggle for existence. She knew that the money realized from the sale of the pearls had been enough to pay all obligations, and her mother, who had insisted on depositing the sum in her own bank account, had assured her that Chichester's affair "would be attended to." But since her mother now kept her check book and her bank book in a locked drawer, Cherry was forced to be content with that statement.

As Cherry approached the house on her return from her unsuccessful visit to the Meadowcraft Studio, she saw that John Chichester's limousine stood at the door. She met its owner in the small parlor where he sat awaiting her mother. As she entered, he rose, pulling nervously at his wisp of mustache. Her glance passed over his evening clothes which suggested quite plainly their plan of a dinner and theater party for two. Cherry's cool greeting perhaps reflected her disapproval. She had meant to go upstairs at once, but at the door she paused and turned.

"Oh," she said quietly, "there's something that I've been wanting to speak to you about."

"Ah, Cherry! Is there anything further that I can do?"

It was her imagination of course which emphasized his wish to placate her.

"No, thanks. It isn't anything like that. It's about what you've already done."

"My dear Cherry," he said pleasantly, "I hope you won't give that a thought."

"But I do." She paused a moment searching for words and then, avoiding subterfuge, spoke directly.

"A few months ago my mother borrowed $10,000 from you"——

"No, I loaned it to her, my dear. There's a difference."

"You were very kind. My father and I deeply appreciated your kindness—your other kindnesses to us all. But what I wanted to know was whether or not my mother has repaid it to you?"

Chichester gazed at her a moment half whimsically and then looked away.

"Has that worried you? My dear girl!"——

"Answer me, please," insisted Cherry, calmly. "Did she pay you or not?"

"I don't quite see"——

"What affair it is of mine? Perhaps you don't think it is. I do. That money went to pay some of my debts as well as hers. Has she given you anything?"

"Oh, yes, of course."

"How much?"

"Really, my dear—it's very foolish of you to disturb yourself. She has paid me—er—a substantial sum. What should it matter to you if I am satisfied? As you know I have more money than I"——

"That's not the point, Mr. Chichester." Cherry broke in quickly. "I would be obliged if you'd let me know just how much we owe you—won't you tell me?"

Chichester hesitated. She did not believe him to be by inclination a liar.

"Won't you let this be a matter between Mrs. Mohun and me?"

The purpose of his question was perhaps generous in intention, but he realized immediately that it had an awkward sound and he saw the swift fire that ran through Cherry's eyes.

"You can hardly think," she said coolly, "that I would be willing to believe in an obligation on my mother's part not shared by the rest of her family."

He covered his momentary confusion by a short laugh.

"Oh, I say, Cherry. Aren't you a little severe? Of course, there's no obligation—except that of a very warm friendship made more gentle by misfortune."

"Oh, yes, of course," she said with a shrug.

He turned toward her again.

"Won't you let me have the privilege of helping you—of helping you all? It's very little I've done. Wouldn't it be more—er—philosophical to say nothing more about it?"

She paused a moment, thinking.

"Then mother has paid you nothing"—— she announced.

"I didn't say that."

"No, but you might as well have."

"Please say no more about it, Cherry."

"I won't, not now. And I thank you for not lying to me."

At this moment there was a sibilance from the stairway outside and Cherry turned to meet her mother. She wore one of the frocks which John Chichester's money had gone to pay for, a new one of black that brought her head into colorful relief. She was more than usually well tinted and, as she came into the room, exhaled delicate odors. Her smile broke languidly.

"So sorry to keep you waiting—oh, Cherry dear, when did you get in? I hope you've had a nice day. Mr. Chichester and I are going to dinner and then to 'Mr. F's Aunt.' It's fearfully funny they say—that is, if Mr. Chichester isn't ashamed of being seen with me in this rag."

"I've never seen you look more charming"— said Chichester gallantly.

"We won't be late, of course, Cherry. But you needn't bother to wait up for me. I have my key. Good night, darling. Come, Mr. Chichester."

Cherry made a perfunctory response to their farewells and stared blankly after them, her mind slowly expanding to the significance of this frank declaration of independence. Her mother's artistry had never seemed so admirable, her worldliness so heartless. Nice day indeed! What did her mother care what sort of a day she had had—if she could have the things that she craved? This affair was going beyond the bounds of dignity. That money never repaid—not a dollar probably. * * * Cherry almost wished, now that her mother had gone, that she had flung out at her and told her what she thought—anything to have ruffled her carefully preened plumage—made a scene which would have brought recriminations even—sullied the perfect mask with tears of anger or dismay—anything which might have awakened her mother to the realities of the situation and to her sense of duty. * * * Nice day indeed!

Dinner was almost ready and the usual odors came through the open door of the kitchen where the small maid of all work was trying to achieve the impossible task of cooking a palatable dinner in the odd moments between rushing in to finish setting the table. Cherry knew what there was to eat—vegetable soup, pork chops, mashed potatoes and fried tomatoes—for she had bought them herself—cup custard to follow. But she knew, too, how it was all going to taste—exactly as though everything had come from the same pot—and tonight she had no appetite.

She made her way somberly up the stairs to her room. Her father's door was open and she looked in. He was standing by the window peering out and listening, it seemed, to the diminishing perspective of sound from John Chichester's car. With an impulse which she couldn't resist she went in and crossed rapidly to him. He heard her footsteps and turned.

"Oh, Cherry dear"— he said calmly and kissed her.

"She spoke to you—?" she asked impulsively. "She told you where she was going?"

He merely shrugged. "Yes," he said, "she told me."

"And you had no objection?" she gasped. "I hadn't meant to speak of this to you, Dad, but it's going too far."

"What is, my dear?"

"Mr. Chichester's attentions. I was on the point of giving Muzzy a piece of my mind."

"I'm glad you didn't—that could have done no good. Let her go—if it makes her happy. I don't need her."

"But don't you realize—? They're seen together constantly, every day. People must be talking."

"Let them," said Mohun with a shrug.

"And you don't care?"

"No," he said calmly, "if he amuses her—for God's sake let him."

His hebetude amazed and shocked her. "People don't know your mother as I do, my dear," he went on calmly. "She's too 'good form' to do anything improper—and too lacking in temperament to want it."

Cherry frowned.

"I don't mean that. I don't know what I do mean except that it's unbecoming—undignified—to say nothing of being disloyal"——

"But if I don't care—why should you?"

It was on Cherry's tongue to tell her father of the unpaid loan, for she knew that he knew nothing of this; but she realized that it would only make him unhappy.

"Oh, all right, Dad," she said, as she went out of the room. "If Muzzy wants to make a fool of herself it's no affair of mine, I suppose."

But in her heart Cherry was very certain that she did not share her father's indifference. And that night long after the light in her father's room had been put out she sat up darning stockings—very thoroughly but very badly—a baleful fire in her eye as she watched the hands of the clock swing around toward midnight. The disconcerting events of the day with regard to her own fortunes had given her much to think of, but none of them was so much in her thoughts as the selfish effrontery of her mother. What her father said might be true, but Cherry decided that another night should not pass without her mother knowing exactly what her daughter thought of her.

At the sound of the latchkey in the door downstairs Cherry quickly laid aside her work and rose. She meant to give her mother time to say her adieus and then go down to her, so she went to the door of her room and out upon the landing. The sound of voices in suppressed tones came up to her quite distinctly.

"No, you must go, Jack—really you must"——

Jack! They were indeed progressing! Cherry coughed discreetly but the couple in the hallway did not see or hear her.

"Oh, I say, Alicia. Just a moment. One more kiss. I swear you never were so adorable."

Cherry heard her mother's titter and the sound of it disgusted her. ...... She went down the stairs. They saw her at the same moment and parted quickly.

"Why, Cherry!" gasped Alicia, staring as though at a ghost. "I thought I asked you not to wait up for me."

"I wasn't sleepy," said Cherry calmly. There was something uncompromising in her attitude as she stood a few steps above them awaiting Mr. Chichester's departure. He was not slow to catch its significance, for he spoke in strictly formal tones to her mother.

"Good night. So glad you could go."

"Thank you so much, Mr. Chichester," said Alicia. "Good night."

She closed the street door and then turned facing her daughter. She must have seen the fire burning in Cherry's eyes, but she gave no sign of comprehension.

"You should have gone with us, Cherry—the most amusing thing," she began lightly as she moved toward the stair. "A very ingenious situation in the third act"——

But Cherry on the bottom step did not stir.

"I came down here because I wanted to talk to you, Muzzy," she said quietly.

"Is—is anything wrong, dear?" asked Alicia.

"Perhaps you can best tell me about that."

"Why, Cherry! What do you mean?"

Cherry went into the parlor where she caught a glimpse of her own face and her mother's, side by side, in the mirror over the mantel. The shadows of weariness which had recently been growing about Cherry's eyes had deepened. To a [illegible] server Alicia might have [illegible] younger than her daughter [illegible]

"Just this," said Cherry [illegible] "I saw Mr. Chichester [illegible] before you left. He told [illegible] had not repaid that loan."

She saw her mother's [illegible] a thin line which [illegible] charm of their [illegible] eyes grow suddenly [illegible]

"Well," she said [illegible] of that?"

"There was no [illegible] repaid it at first. [illegible] you would attend to it."

"Doesn't it occur to you [illegible] that I'm quite capable [illegible] after my own affairs?"

"If it was your affair [illegible] isn't. That money went [illegible] bills as well as yours [illegible] affair only. It's Dad's [illegible]

"How? I borrowed it [illegible] ligation. Your father [illegible] about it. Why should [illegible] long as Mr. Chichester [illegible]

"I worry just as Dad [illegible] knew?"

Alicia's brows drew [illegible] fishly. "Is there any [illegible] him?"

Love Letters That Made History

By JOSEPH KAYE.

The Empress Eudoxia, Peter the Great and Major Gleboff.

AN uncouth giant, a beautiful young patrician, and a kind-hearted officer formed an unusual and striking triangle in the dawn of the eighteenth century.

The uncouth giant was Peter the Great, the patrician the Empress Eudoxia, his wife, and the officer, Major Gleboff, whose name would have passed into obscurity if it were not for the part he played in the life of the Empress.

Peter the First, surnamed "The Great, was one of the founders of the Russia that was and a tremendous force in the history of the world, but as a man he descended to unbelievable depths of hatred, cruelty and dissipation. The Tsar had the nature and tastes of a peasant and hated anything that savored of the refined. He mixed among his people, worked with them at manual labor and also joined them in drunken carouses. He received diplomats in a short shirt, with his hose slopping over his feet, he could be seen on the streets at times clad in the filthiest clothes and his large build, great strength and fearsome temper maginfied every uncongenial quality in him. He could be truly regarded as the personification of one of the terrible, powerful giants that awed us in our fairy tale days.

To offset the uncouth nature of Peter his mother hopefully married him to Eudoxia Lopukhina, a beautiful, finely bred though not overclever lady. To a man of Peter's inclinations a woman like Eudoxia was gall and within a year after his marriage he despatched her to a convent to pass 20 years of her life in a lonely, friendless existence. Peter later took to his bosom a kitchen maid, formerly a camp follower, who fascinated him because of the neat way in which she kept the kitchen of a friend. It was she who became the famous Catherine, elevated by Peter, in spite of the shocked protests of his country, to the throne of Empress.

Confined in her solitary cell at the convent Eudoxia suffered every deprivation. She had not enough to eat nor clothes sufficient to keep her warm through the intense cold of a Russian winter, and she had to appeal to friends for necessary comforts. One of those friendly persons who took compassion upon the unfortunate queen was a Major Gleboff. His kindness aroused in Eudoxia a fondness that soon developed into a passion, though she knew he was a married man and she was nominally the wife of Peter. In time, Gleboff either became fearful of the consequences of keeping up his relations with Eudoxia, or his interest cooled, for he stopped coming to her. Then followed the letters from Eudoxia to Gleboff which were to bring the latter to a horrible death at the hands of Peter.

The following excerpts are from these letters:

"Where thy heart is, dear one, mine is also; where thy tongue is, there is my head; thy will is also mine. * * *

"My light, my soul, my joy, has the cruel hour of separation come already? How can I endure existence? Rather would I see my soul parted from my body. God alone knows how dear thou art to me. Why do I love thee so much, my adored one, that without thee life is worthless? Why art thou angry with me? Why, my batushka, dost thou not come to see me? Have pity on me, O my lord, and come to see me tomorrow. O, my world, my dearest and best, answer me; do not let me die of grief. * * * Send me but a crust of bread that thou hast bitten with thy teeth, or the waistcoat thou has worn, that I may have something to bring thee near to me."

Eudoxia's love for Gleboff came to light in connection with a plot against Peter. The nuns of the convent where Eudoxia was confined were questioned and when they would not betray the queen they were put to torture, so brutal that many of them died, until confession was obtained. At Gleboff's home was found a package of Eudoxia's letters which the foolish man had kept and even labeled "Letters from the Empress." Gleboff was forthwith taken in hand by Peter and tortured to confess the story of the Queen's love for him in detail. When Gleboff's agony had brought the desired words to his mouth Peter ordered his execution by a form of crucifixion, and, to prolong his sufferings, he had the wretched man wrapped warmly in furs in order that the winter cold should not put an end to him before his wounds did. In this horrible state Gleboff existed 28 hours before death came.

Peter did not dare to deal with Eudoxia as he doubtless wished to and the farthest he could go was to have her publicly flogged and sent to an even more remote nunnery. When Peter died Catherine vented her spite on Eudoxia in a freer fashion than Peter and placed her in a damp and vermin-infested dungeon of a fortress. There Eudoxia remained for two years when, upon the succession to the throne of Peter II. she was released and brought home and given the honors that were denied her by Peter.

But the mind of the queen who had remained almost 30 years a prisoner was weakened and she asked to be returned to a convent, where two years later she died.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

Air Flivvers.

THIS is news to make me shiver
And I hear with upraised hair girls are tiring of the flivver
And are driving in the air. Into nifty places they're hopping, soaring o'er my helpless head when they want to do some shopping or must match a spool of thread. "Oh," they cry, "the world keeps turning—would you have us standing still?
You would better bet we're yearning for the very latest thrill. Once the auto satisfied us, now that way seems slow and stale, and no traffic cops can guide us when we're sailing to a sale." Fate is heartless, cruel, bitter; how can caution aid me now, when above me airships flitter with fair flappers at the prow? Expert once at fancy dodging through the mazy thoroughfare, I could safely reach my lodging with my legs and arms all there. When the auto horns were blowing, to their tunes I paid scant heed; I could go and keep on going, for no car had half my speed. Yes, of fear I was a scorner, dauntless daring was my role, for, when chased into a corner, I could climb a wireless pole. So I thought I was in clover, having solved the traffic muss; now that joyous day is over, with the ladies' air-line bus. As upon my way I'm dashing, working for my daily bread, half a ton may soon come crashing from the azure overhead. Oh, to own a cyclone cellar, portable, to have at hand when wild engine or propeller makes some luckless air-craft land! Oh, for some tall cliff upstanding, with a cave where I might go, when some flier makes a landing right into my bungalow! Now, no taxi makes me shudder, but when ladies learn to fly and the flapper takes the rudder,
I am leaving for Shanghai!

Green Tomato Chow Chow

ONE peck tomatoes, two heads of cabbage, two quarts of onions, four red peppers. Put all through chopper, add a couple of tablespoons of salt and let stand over night. Drain in the morning, put in kettle, cover with vinegar to which you have added three cups of brown sugar, two tablespoons of celery seed, two tablespoons of mustard seed, and two ounces of tumeric powder. Put in little bag, one tablespoon of whole cloves, one tablespoon of whole allspice, cook until thick and can.

The art of pleasing is the art of rising in the world.

"A Little Learning"

By WINIFRED BLACK.

SHE thinks she can write—my dear little friend.

And she's serious about it, so deadly serious.

She doesn't want to scribble just to make a living, or to add a little something to her dress allowance. She wants to "lead the literary life."

She has "a message for the world."

I don't quite know what the message is and I don't believe she's exactly clear on the subject herself, but there's a message somewhere and the world's waiting for it, and she's oh, so eager to deliver it!

And there's a conspiracy against her. Nobody will buy her work.

She's been to three editors. Why, she's even asked them to tea and introduced them to all sorts of really nice people and they just bowed and smiled and said "No cream, thank you," and "I'll take another of the little cakes, please," and let it go at that.

And her work came back—just the same.

And she doesn't see what's the matter with it. She gets quite desperate and cynical thinking about it. But then she remembers Keats and "Endymion" and all that sort of thing, and how the "really great geniuses" are always persecuted or neglected or something, and she takes comfort and feels that anyhow she's a member of the little band of devoted martyrs—and she smiles and sighs and really has quite a fine time over it.

She Really Can't Write.

But lately she is neglecting her husband and he acts as if he were a bit bored by it. I think he's the sort of a man who doesn't like to have people thinking about something else when they're talking to him, and I noticed a yearning look in the eyes of Husband's exceedingly attractive little stenographer the other day when I went in to see Husband on a matter of business.

The little stenographer isnt thinking about something else. All she's thinking about is Husband and how sort of blue and lonesome he acts.

And the worst of it is, Husband's Wife really can't write at all.

In the first place, she hasn't a thing in the world to say, and in the next place, she doesn't know how to say it.

But she's such a dear and she looks so eager and wistful when she reads you one of her poems—or a bit of free verse more likely—why, you really haven't the heart to disappoint her when she asks you to give her your candid opinion.

The "Dangerous Thing."

I wonder what you ought to do about it really when she comes and sits and talks by the hour about her longings concerning the Message and the persecutions she is enduring.

It would take courage to tell her the truth, wouldn't it? Even if you didn't tell it spitefully, even if you just said:

"Honey, you're the darling of the world, you're so sweet and so pretty I'd like to eat you, and everybody loves you and you have a gift for making people happy—why do you want to bother with that clicky old typewriter? Leave that sort of thing to those who can't do anything else."

Even if you said that in your best way, your most honest way, and your kindest way, it would hurt her feelings and make her cross and it wouldn't do the least little bit of good in all the world.

"A little learning is a dangerous thing."

I used to think that was such a strange saying, but now I begin to understand it.

There's nothing poisonous about the little learning itself. The only thing is that you never think it's just a little. You always think it's a whole lot—like the frog who tried to be as big as the ox, and died trying.

But I wish I hadn't seen the way the very attractive stenographer was beginning to be sorry for poor lonesome Husband.

IS YOUR CHILD HAPPY?

By William A. McKeever

STUDY your cross and peevish child systematically and you will most probably discover some removable cause of his unaccountable state of mind.

Precisely as is the case with adults the mind and the body of the child act in about the same level of well-being and efficiency. They are "Siamese Twins." The very nature of childhood is joy and gladness. It is not given to him to bemoan the past or to worry over the future. Childhood's time is now. To reach out around him with his sense organs and take in the present constitutes the full measure of his daily work.

Physical condition out of alignment, therefore, is the thing to look for if your child is irritable. Scolding, nagging and punishment will here tend to aggravate the trouble. Try these simple tests:

Examine the diet. You may find retarded or imperfect elimination. It may be a case of too much sugar, too much starch or too much protein. Little tots should scarcely touch meat, and they often develop a morbid appetite for sweets. Some appear to crave little besides bread; others are fed milk and pickles during the same dinner course. Milk, vegetables and fruit should constitute the bulk of the child's nourishment. A little common sense study of the easily obtained dietary list will make this matter clear to the parent.

Late hours up at night, with perhaps some refreshments—poisons for the little, fatigued body—that is often the discoverable enemy of the health and happiness of the child. Short hours of dull heavy sleep will mean lowered vitality and weakened brain power, also a cross child.

Examine the atmosphere. You may find the hidden cause of your child's irritability and low mentality. Many little ones are caused to remain long in smoke-laden rooms. It has been found by test that air heavily charged with tobacco smoke will render eggs infertile, will stunt young rabbits and make young chickens aenemic. Show father how to improvise a smoke ventilator and thus draw the tobacco fumes from the living room, for the sake of his baby.

Examine the exercise. Additional running, romping, climbing and rough-and-tumble with others of his age may clear up your child's morbid mind with magical effect. He should exercise daily to the point of considerable fatigue and perspiration.

Finally, you owe it to the child and to yourself to go into the problem of his irritability with system and common sense until you find a relief. The difficulty is likely to be simple and easily remedied, as suggested above. And you may thus help your little one on toward a later mastery of his own destiny.

Uncle Sam Says—

Help the Boys

Almost every boy has his tool chest and is constantly endeavoring to use it. Realizing this, the Government aims to help him to produce articles useful on the farm and in the home. The Government booklet, "Farm and Home Mechanics," describes the necessary tools and gives directions for such general work as setting posts, building fences, planting trees, pruning, caring for harness, laying cement walks, painting and soldering. The most useful part of the booklet is the 30 working drawings covering many useful household conveniences which any boy can make.

Readers of the Post-Dispatch may obtain a copy of this booklet direct from the Government for the cost of printing by sending 15 cents in coin to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., asking for "Farm and Home Mechanics—Indian Office." Do not send postage stamps.

SPANISH CAKES

PLACE in a saucepan one cup of water and half a cup of butter. Bring slowly to a boil and stir into it slowly two cups of sifted flour. Stir until smooth and boil three minutes. Remove from the fire and beat into the mixture the well-beaten yolks of three eggs and one and a half teaspoons of baking powder. Beat well, fold in lightly the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs and drop by spoonfuls onto a papered and greased baking sheet. Bake in quick oven 20 minutes. When baked, split and spread with a good jam.

We are never so ridiculous from the habits we have as from those we affect to have.

WHO'S WHO IN THE HOME

By Aline Michaelis

DO not permit your aggressive child to win all the plaudits. Too often mere brazenness is mistaken for brilliancy. Loud music is not better than that of softer tone, but it may attract a longer-range attention.

Your talkative child is likely to be too much noticed and your reflective child too little. See that each gets his fair amount of recognition.

Your conversational type may bring his peculiar talents to the dinner table and display them there while young mechanical genius may come with no fine quality apparent. However, you can and should explain the inconspicuous genius to the uninformed visitor.

In order to grow and increase its product, the hidden talent of your boy or girl must have its share of favorable opinion. If you fail to search the young character through, the latent genius is likely to die.

The Method Used.

Circled about the table with me today are five kinds of children—a nontalkative girl musical genius; a motherly type of girl, highly skilled in the finery of needle art; an inventor type of boy, who has made an electric churn of an old fan; a serious domestic-minded girl, who carries the burdens of the household in her subconsciousness; a rapid-fire boy conversationalist, who entertains all with his witticisms.

Now, I have carefully inquired into all these charming young personalities, in order to show each one his full share of attention and to encourage his genius, whatever it may be. The talkative boy performed conspicuously and required no coaxing or other provision, but the talent of the others had to be sought. The casual visitor might have overlooked nearly all of it. My method was to ask for the explanation of each young personality and to follow this till the peculiar achievement was observed.

To go to the parlor to hear one sing, to go to the kitchen, to the workshop, to the laboratory, to the study room—all for the purpose of appreciating the budding genius of each member of a family of children—this might appear unnecessary and trivial to some. To me, however, it is expressive of "dynamic citizenship." It is a sure means of assisting the young to create in full their own personalities.

Then, while you are busy bringing out the "Who's Who" among the children, why not bring mother into this scheme? Too often mother must be contented to find all her pleasure in her quiet enjoyment of the achievements of the other members of the family group.

The older children and the father, also, must learn to switch the conversation to her side occasionally and must elicit favorable attention to her talents and achievements. Certainly, she has talents hidden away somewhere; otherwise her children would not be so bright.

Tell 'Em Who You Are.

In this connection, it may be shown that children are slow to "discover" their parents' accomplishments. Who and what is my father? Who and what is my mother? These two questions should direct the serious inquiry of every youth and his sister.

No matter how modest, how unpretentious the parent may be, for the child to search the older character through in quest of the quiet genius there is certain to increase respect, if not reverence, on the part of the younger member.

Wherefore, look to "Who's Who" of every member of the home group—father, mother, sister, brother—and play this up till each enjoys his own deserved share of recognition. Such methods will tend to equalize the pleasure of all and to add much to the sum total of household enjoyment.

Five minutes passed in thinking how to do things right often saves hours of lamentation over things done wrong.

Sympathy steps into the shadow to lead the sorrower into the sunshine.

To be thrown on one's own resources is to be cast in the very lap of fortune, for our faculties undergo a development and display an energy of which they were previously incapable.

Some people are always in doubt and never get out.

REVERSIBLE HUSBANDS

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall

MORAL—It May Be WOMAN'S Privilege to Change Her Mind—But She Has No Monopoly.

WHAT every home needs is a dictograph!
It should be used to record the utterances of the master of the house,
And thus to provide irrefutable evidence
Of what he says he wants done—
So that when he changes his mind six or 24 or 48 hours later
Out of his own mouth he may be confuted!
Reversible rugs, portieres and sofa pillows
All have their domestic uses;
But every woman should pray to be delivered
From a reversible husband!
He's the man who, at 8 p. m.,
Says yes indeed, he would like an omelet for breakfast—
And who, at 8 a. m., exclaims in tragic tones:
"Why do you ALWAYS have eggs?
You know I can't TOUCH 'em!"
He tells his wife:
"It's getting late—better have the screens taken off."
Then, when a warm Sunday throws the windows open
And a thawed-out November fly hovers about his Sunday magazine supplement,
He snarls peevishly, "For the Lord's sake, why're you in such a rush about hauling in those screens?"
He overrules mother,
And tells the boy that, sure, he can go to the movies,
Even if it is a school night.
Then he gets so tired sitting up till 11 p. m. to let in the youngster
That he scolds: "You've no business to be out till this hour in the middle of the week—
March to bed at once, sir, and you can't go anywhere again for a fortnight!"
When the reversible husband takes his wife out to dinner
He always makes a point of asking her where she wants to go.
"You must choose, dear," he urges, gallantly.
But when she says, "That nice little French restaurant we both like,"
He retorts, "Oh, I NEVER liked that hole;
We'll go and get some spaghetti on Seventh avenue"——
And they GO to Seventh avenue, unless he reverses himself again before they get there!
He presents his wife with chocolates and volunteers the statement that they don't agree with him and he doesn't intend to touch 'em.
About two hours later he coyly inquires,
"Have you got any of that candy over there?"
Half an hour later he says, "Not another piece!"
Ten minutes after that he says, "One piece more!"
And yet they try to tell us that the privilege of changing one's mind
Is a FEMININE monopoly
It isn't enough that the wife of the reversible husband be a mind reader—
She must keep about three pages ahead in his mind, unless she wants to be fooled.
For what he thinks day after tomorrow
Is NEVER what he thinks today.
And when the poor lady reminds him day after tomorrow
Of what he said day before yesterday,
He just declares he didn't say it—and that's that—
(Which is why a domestic dictograph would come in handy!)
Oh, the inconstant husband makes women weep.
But the INCONSISTENT husband makes them swear!
And he's 10 times as plentiful as the other!

NEW YEAR GREETING.

A BENEDICTION FOR THE NEW YEAR:—The Lord bless thee, and keep thee. The Lord make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee. The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace.—Numbers 5:24-26.

CARROTS SAUCED

CARROTS with a sweet and sour sauce may be new. Cook the carrots in the usual fashion.

Serve with this sauce:

2 T butter.
2 T flour.
½ T salt.
¼ T pepper.
2 T sugar.
2 T vinegar.
1 C water in which the carrots were cooked.

Melt the butter, add the flour, salt, pepper. Cook until bubbling, add the water, then the vinegar and sugar. Pour over the carrots and serve hot.

We should often be ashamed of our very best actions, if the world only saw the motives which caused them.

He only is great who has the habits of greatness, who after performing what none in 10,000 could accomplish, passes on like Samson, and "tells neither father nor mother, or, if."

Children Cry for Fletcher's
CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the wrapper for over 30 years just to protect the coming generations. Do not be deceived. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but experiments that endanger the health of Children—Experience against Experiment.

Never attempt to relieve your baby with a remedy that you would use for yourself.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. The Man on the Sandbox

THE NIGHT BEFORE NEW YEAR'S.

'TWAS the night before New Year's and all through the house
Everybody was trying to get on a souse;
And many succeeded in getting a bun,
In spite of the fact that "it couldn't be done."

The people assembled were happy and gay,
And now and again they would moisten their clay
With something that seemed to be stashed on the hip,
From where it would furtively steal to the lip.

In the midst of the revel the New Year was born,
With dancing and singing and tooting of horn;
When into the picture an officer lurched,
And yelled, "Happy New Year! Stand up and be searched."

A NEW HAZARD.

The Briarcliffe Golf Club has insured Gene Sarazen's life for $100,000. They can now play the insurance hazard with impunity.

The long and short of the home-run question seems to be long hits and short fences.

An English butler recently died, leaving $40,000. That's hustling.

GOOD WORK.

HE might have been a sutler.
But preferred to be a butler
With an eagle eye upon the festive tip.
He hustled for a Lord
And acquired quite a horde.
For he hustled at a 40,000 clip.

"Sent to Jail Until He Talks."
A short sentence will end his sentence.

"Justice Rules Woman Who Justified in Kicking Husband."
She had a kick coming, we take it.

WHY NOT?

Why not make the street car company give the 5-cent fare a whirl, then if they find they can't make the grade give 'em a boost?

"Rare Named as Tackle on All-Southern High School Team."
He must be a Baer.

"Comic Song Won the Christmas Handicap at New Orleans."
We take it Comic Song was handicapped by being a little horse.

THAT'S OUT.

OH, what has become of the papers and sack
From which we once made the delectable "tack"?
For close observation has recently shown
That very few smokers are rolling their own.

If Branch Rickey doesn't draw some new Cards he'll have to stand pat on his present hand.

CAN'T LOSE HIM.

OH, where is the star of yesterweek
Who crossed the gridiron like a streak?
His name will now appear in print
As right guard on the basket quint.

TOO TRUE.

The woman carrying a handbag is easy prey for the guy with a sandbag.

Jess Willard says he knows he can beat Jack Dempsey. That being the case, Jack would be foolish to fight him.

"Why are you rushing Miss Plump?"
"Economy. Doctor ordered her to eat no candy, and walk every place she goes."

MY FAVORITE STORIES
By IRVIN S. COBB.

DARKNESS BEFORE THE DAWN.

A BARN-STORMING troupe, specializing in Shakespearean repertoire, was fighting its difficult way through the Middle West. Business was bad, as usual. Indeed, it was worse than usual. For a month salaries had not been paid. One constable and two hotel keepers were now traveling with the company, mainly hoping to collect their claims. Only the resourcefulness of the manager had saved the struggling outfit from complete financial disaster.

On Tuesday morning of a certain week the leading man—the star, if there was any star in the aggregation—approached the manager.

"Let me have half a dollar, will you?" he said.

The manager gave him a hurt look.

"Say, what's the matter with you people, anyhow?" he demanded; "always wanting money. What do you think I am—a national bank or something? It's only yesterday that the heavy man kept nagging after me for $2. Said he wanted to get his laundry out. What does he need with laundry? Am I bothering about my laundry? No. Here I am working like a tiger to dig up railroad fares for you people and square up hotel keepers and keep this show moving across the country until we run into some good territory. And now you come yelling for dough. What do you want with a half-dollar, anyhow?"

"I'll tell you what I need with it," said the leading man. "You announced 'Romeo and Juliet' for the bill tonight, didn't you?"

"Yes. What of it?"

"Well, you're expecting me to play Romeo, ain't you?"

"Sure I am."

"Well, how in thunder do you figure I'm going to play Romeo with a three days' beard? I've got to have a shave—that's what I need that money for. I've got to spend the most of it in a barber shop so Romeo won't come on with a quarter of an inch of black whiskers on his face."

The manager considered the thick, dark scrubble on his star's chops and saw the force of the argument. Slowly, he rammed a reluctant hand into his pocket, then, as a smile of relief broke over his face, brought it out empty.

"Tell you what we'll do," he said, briskly; "we'll change the bill for tonight to 'Othello.'"
